

By Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat

EPISODE 2

Blood Vessel

SHOOTING SCRIPT

ISSUED 16.04.19

© 2018 Count Dracula Ltd. All Rights

Reserved.

The screenplay is the property of Count Dracula LTD ("Producer"). Distribution or disclosure of any information of whatever nature in whatever form relating to the characters, story and screenplay itself obtained from any source including without limitation this screenplay or information received from Producer, to unauthorized persons, or the sale, copying or reproduction of this screenplay is strictly prohibited. This screenplay contains information and therefore is given for review on a strictly confidential basis. By reading this screenplay you agree to be bound by a duty of confidence to Producer and its subsidiary and parent companies.

PRE-TITLES

1

INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY.

1

A magnificent wine cellar, glittering with ancient bottles. It is a strange, curving room - perhaps more like the architecture of a fun-house than a wine cellar. Gas light on the dusty glass.

The overall effect is wonderfully antique. Almost comforting. This is a wine cellar where you'd want to spend some time.

... the room curls round two leather chairs pulled up before a morocco table. On the table is a chess board, mid-game.

Closer on the board: among the pieces, a fly is wandering...

DRACULA (O.S.)

Can't bear a bad book, can you?

The camera finds DRACULA at the top of a set of spiral steps. He holds a very old volume. For a moment, it's not clear who he's talking to - is he talking to the camera?

DRACULA (CONT'D)

It's a commitment. A contract between an author and a reader. I have to be engaged at once. Arrested. Or -

He flings aside the book in his hand - turns to look down at someone we don't yet see.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

(smiles)

After all, one only has so much time.

SISTER AGATHA, is leaning in the doorway - in her Nun's clothes, minus the wimple. Her hair tumbles around her shoulders and she looks supremely relaxed. It's all very Lauren Bacall. Almost post-coital.

AGATHA

That's something you have in abundance, surely.

DRACULA

(cheery)

Well! More than most, perhaps! But it's the quality of the time spent, isn't it?

AGATHA
Why are we talking about stories?

DRACULA
Because I want to tell you one.

He gestures towards the chairs at the chess table.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
Please, sit down. As you can see, there is a game in progress.

She steps towards the chess board, assesses it.

He glides down the steps with easy confidence.

Agatha gazes at the chess set and frowns.

AGATHA
A knight is menacing a queen.

DRACULA
Whose knight, whose queen?

AGATHA
Who's black, who's white?

DRACULA
You choose.

Agatha considers - sits at the white side of the board.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
(As he sits opposite)
Ah! The losing side.

AGATHA
We shall see.

She reaches a hand for a piece - and freezes. The room seems to rock for a moment, the bottles clink.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
So. After you left the convent, what then?

DRACULA
I had already booked passage to England. On board the Demeter.

He reaches over, pulls a bottle from the rack - but as he sets it lengthwise on the table, we see that it isn't wine: it's a ship in a bottle.

Agatha regards it for a moment.

AGATHA
It must have been an interesting voyage.

DRACULA
Oh, you have no idea.

AGATHA
Then tell me.

She makes a move.

DRACULA
This is a long and complex story and I would advise you not to get too attached to any of the characters.

He takes the piece she has just moved, and as she sets the taken piece down, it takes us to a shot of -

- the ship in the bottle. A fly lands on the bottle as we -

CUT TO:

TITLE SEQUENCE

CUT TO:

2 INT. SOKOLOV'S CABIN - NIGHT

2

An anguished cry.

On Sokolov, waking from what was clearly a nightmare. He's on his bunk - soaked in sweat, shaking and feverish.

Looks round the cabin. Moonlight through the porthole, the gentle sway and creak of a ship at sea -

Rests back. All is normal, all is peaceful ...

... except ...

... what is that noise?

Drumming fingers? Drum, drum - scrape of fingernails.

Drum, drum, scrape.

Drum, drum, scrape.

Where's it coming from?

The deeply shadowed corner of the cabin.

Now, something slowly emerging from the darkness -

- fingers, a hand, a wrist -

- is someone crawling out of the shadows?

- and then -

- nothing below the wrist.

It's just a severed hand - pale and black-nailed, like it was cut off a long time ago (ie no gore) - but with a life of its own. A beast with five fingers!

Sokolov draws back in horror. No!! No!!

Now a low, guttural voice from the darkness. (The language is Russian, subtitled.)

OLGAREN

(Subtitled)

Have you seen my hand, Captain?

Sokolov looks round. There is now massive looming figure detaching itself from the shadow. OLGAREN - huge, bearded.

His face is zombie white. He lurches, fitful and jerky.

Sokolov shrinking back, horrified.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

(Subtitled)

Have you seen my hand, Captain?

He now raises his hands, imploringly - except one of them is missing, just a stump! (Again, no gore.)

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

(Subtitled)

Have you see my hand?

A sudden movement, makes Sokolov look down.

The hand is now lying in the centre of his chest, fingers starting to dig and tear into his flesh -

Sokolov screams -

CUT TO:

3 INT. SOKOLOV'S CABIN - DAY 3

- and wakes. This time sunshine is streaming through the porthole, and he really has woken up. He flops back, recovering.

CUT TO:

4 INT. DR. SHARMA'S LAB - NIGHT 4

A hot, sweaty night in Calcutta. A horror lab, dense with scientific equipment - a place for postmortems and dreadful experiments. A bloodstained table, like a butcher's slab. The shutters stand open letting in the sultry air and chirrup of crickets. Everywhere Indian writing and detail.

Pacing the lab at this late hour: DR SHARMA. A clever, precise man of science. He's waiting for someone, and is clearly slightly agitated.

A knock at the door. He steps quickly over and admits two disreputable character carrying a mouldering coffin between them - the Indian Burke and Hare. This is GUPTA and KHAN.

SHARMA

On the table, please, thank you.

Gupta and Khan comply, hefting the coffin on the table.

SHARMA (CONT'D)

Are you sure this is the right one?

GUPTA

It's the grave you pointed out.

SHARMA

The one the children ... complained about?

GUPTA

The one with the weeping.

SHARMA

Good, good. Well, open it.

Gupta and Khan exchange a look. Hard cut to:

The lid is levered off and leaned against the wall

- and then notice that Sharma has gone straight to the lid, and is examining it. What?

Sharma is pointing to the underside of the lid.

SHARMA (CONT'D)

Look at these. Seventy years ago this unfortunate was buried alive.
Observe the scratches.

We see that the lid is scored with desperate incisions and dark with old blood.

SHARMA (CONT'D)

And it is as I feared. Do you see?

GUPTA

See what?

SHARMA

This coffin is seventy years old - and yet some of scratches are quite fresh.

We hold on the scratches -

- and then there is a movement from behind the three men, there is a terrible rattling exhalation.

They slowly turn -

- and we hold on their faces, as the shadow of something rising from the coffin grows over them ...

CUT TO:

5

INT. HOSPITAL WARD/CORRIDOR OUTSIDE - DAY

5

A bead of blood on a dead boy's lips. We pan up to see a hand close the staring eyes.

Wider: a doctor has closed the boy's eyes. Standing at the bed, the boy's MOTHER is being comforted by a nurse.

A priest is there too - FATHER STEPASHIN. (The language is Russian, subtitled.)

MOTHER

(Subtitled)

My Piotr. Oh, my Piotr. My beautiful boy. Piotr!

STEPASHIN

(Subtitled)

I am so sorry, my child.

MOTHER

(Subtitled)

He had such plans. He had been offered a place on a sailing ship, he was going to see the world. But he never even left this miserable town.

STEPASHIN

(Subtitled)

Piotr would have made a fine sailor.

On a YOUNG LAD - who we will come to know as PIOTR - is mopping the floor in the corridor outside. He's standing just by the opened door to hear these words, which seem to sting him.

He glances towards a window in the corridor outside the sickroom.

His POV: through the window we can see down the harbour where the Demeter is moored.

On his face, staring at it. Thoughtful.

Back to the death bed in the other room. The Mother is lamenting, as Stepashin steps to the door.

MOTHER

(Subtitled)

Look at him. So perfect, so young. Everything in front of him - and now he has no future.

Stepashin closes the door - effectively in the boy's face.

The boy, now cut off from the room, walks to the window. Looks down at the Demeter - a whole world of adventure, waiting for him. A spark in his eyes.

Back to the sick room (and what the boy DOESN'T see.)

Stepashin addresses Piotr's mother - grave and sad.

STEPASHIN

(Subtitled)

Piotr does have a future. But a dark one.

(Heavily)

If you love him, my child, you know what you must do.

Reverently he hands her a stake and hammer.

MOTHER
 (Subtitled)
 Is there no other way?

STEPASHIN
 (Subtitled)
 He consorted with darkness. Only you can bring him back to the light.

She nods, wracked with sobs. Places the stake over her son's heart, the priest holding her shaking hand.

- we cut to a shot from behind the mother as she raises up the hammer and slams it down!

The boy on the bed arches, convulses - his face is a rictus mask of rage.

STEPASHIN (CONT'D)
 (Subtitled)
 Again!

Shadows flap grotesquely across the walls, as the Mother raises the hammer, slams it down -

STEPASHIN (CONT'D)
 (Subtitled)
 Again!

The shadows flap and slam!

- we pan from the bed, to the door.

Now we cut outside, to the corridor.

The window, the Demeter still visible through it. The mop stands abandoned next to it. We push in on the window, to a shot of the Demeter ...

DISSOLVE TO:

6

EXT. DOCK - DUSK.

6

... the same shot, as the sky darkens. The sun is now setting.

The Demeter is a ramshackle sailing ship of decent size.

Closer on the ship, panning along it to the name: Demeter.

Now on a wooden, coffin like box - it is being winched on to the deck of the Demeter.

Wider:

Panning round. We see a pile of the coffin-like boxes waiting to be transferred to the ship.

Closer on the boxes. Flies are crawling over the dark wood. We hold on these for a moment, sinister and silent -

- then pan to the dock. It is a crowded, colourful place. DECK-HANDS are fitting out the ship. WOMEN are loading provisions into baskets.

CAPTAIN SOKOLOV at the foot of the gangway, is signing up crew.

OLGAREN - the man from the dream, but in reality he is a big boisterous man with a twinkle in his eye and an iron spike instead of one hand - is writing his name in the Captain's ledger with child-like letters.

Sokolov looks a little hauntedly at the spike. (Now in Russian, subtitled.)

SOKOLOV

(Subtitled)

I'll try and get you back in one piece this time.

OLGAREN

(Subtitled)

How many times? No one blamed you for what happened. Who says the Captain has to go down with his ship.

SOKOLOV

(Subtitled)

Everyone.

OLGAREN

(Subtitled)

Not me. And what do I need two hands for? This is better for stirring soup. So thanks!

Sokolov claps him on the shoulder - a fond smile.

Over this, we hear:

ADISA

(From off)

Lord and Lady Ruthven.

And there's LORD RUTHVEN, a handsome young Englishman, next to him is his beautiful wife DORABELLA. Behind them stands ADISA, their servant.

Sokolov smiles and immediately switches to English (which, without fuss, we now stick with!)

SOKOLOV

Ah! A great pleasure. Welcome aboard the Demeter, my Lord.

(bows)

My lady.

DORABELLA

Thank you, thank you! We just got married! Isn't it wonderful!

A discreet eye-roll from Adisa

SOKOLOV

Wonderful! My congratulations to you both.

LORD RUTHVEN

(winks)

Make it a long voyage, eh, Captain?

He laughs, a little forced. He takes his wife's arm and they ascend the gangway.

On Adisa, looking at Ruthven's back as he follows.

ADISA

(Under his breath)

Oh, it will be.

As he goes he swats a fly out of the way.

We pan up with the fly to another coffin-like box being winched on board. We pan with the box for a moment, taking us to:

A rum barrel on the deck: as the crew sign, they're given a tot of rum from a barrel by a grizzled sailor in a distinctive red neckerchief - PORTMANN (40s).

Another sailor, ABRAMOFF is handed his tot -

- but he's too distracted to take it. He's watching the beautiful Dorabella, looking around the deck. Instantly smitten.

PORTMANN
 (German accent) Stop your dreaming, s...son, she's not for the likes of you. Here.
 Drink. Move on.

Embarrassed, Abramoff takes his drink, goes. Can't help sneaking another look at Dorabella.

Young PIOTR - the young lad we saw in the hospital mopping the floor - has reached the head of the queue. He's taking in all these new sights.

PORTMANN (CONT'D)
 Piotr?

Piotr doesn't respond (it's not his name, after all.)

PORTMANN (CONT'D)
 Piotr, yes?

PIOTR (Realising)
 Yes, Piotr. That's me.

PORTMANN
 Here. Drink. Move.

Piotr drinks. Grimaces.

PORTMANN (CONT'D)
 Move on, s...s...son!

Piotr moves on - he's wide-eyed clearly unnerved by everything he sees and new to it all.

Watching him, a raddled old sea dog: OLD VALENTIN.

OLD VALENTIN
 Oh, look at this one. Are you as green as your face?

Piotr looks to him - can't conceal the truth of this. Old Valentin puts a comforting hand on his shoulder.

OLD VALENTIN (CONT'D)
 You're probably thinking this all looks very strange and frightening.

PIOTR
 Yes sir.

OLD VALENTIN
 (Nods thoughtfully)
 I agree.

Old Valentin moves on, nodding grimly to himself. Piotr, a little aghast, looks to the dock.

Piotr's POV: by the quayside, an OLD WOMAN is looking at the pile of boxes waiting to be transferred. She seems fascinated, horrified.

She crosses herself. Then looks to the ship as another box starts to be winched on board.

She sees Piotr. Stares at him for a moment. And slowly, haunted, shakes her head.

Piotr, now chilled to the bone.

We find Sokolov and Olgaren are walking up the gangway, then towards the quarter deck

OLGAREN
 How many passengers?

SOKOLOV Seven.

OLGAREN
 Seven? What, we're full?

He looks round. More passengers boarding -

DR SHARMA and his 12 year old daughter YAMINI. Sharma now has a livid scar down one cheek (or wherever it looks best.) He didn't escape from his deadly encounter.

Olgaren frowns, watching them.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)
 But this ship is never full.

SOKOLOV
 We can cope.

OLGAREN Cargo?

SOKOLOV
 Saltpetre. Children's dolls, sulphur, soil, charcoal.

OLGAREN Soil?

Sokolov looks to the big pile of boxes on the dock.

SOKOLOV

(shrugs)

Or mould. Boxes and boxes of it.

A fly buzzes past him. He swats it absently.

OLGAREN

Why would anyone send boxes of mould?

SOKOLOV

Who knows, who cares. I'm sure it'll taste better than your food.

OLGAREN

Me too.

They smile. Old friends who are glad to be back together.

Now another passenger coming on board: an elderly lady, the GRAND DUCHESS VALERYIA.

Watching her arrive, OLD VALENTIN shakes his head as he joins Sokolov and Olgaren.

OLD VALENTIN

Bad luck. Having women on board.
"Like a gold ring in a pig's snout is a beautiful woman without discretion." Proverbs. 11:22.

SOKOLOV

(Sighs at Valentin)

All aboard?

PORTMANN

All but one, s...sir.

He looks down at the ledger.

PORTMANN (CONT'D)

A Count...

DRACULA

Count Dracula.

They look up.

DRACULA is suddenly standing in front of them, as if summoned.

He's dressed in travelling cloak and hat. He looks dashing, at ease. We haven't quite seen this version before - this is the man-about-town Dracula.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
(V.O.)
You look surprised.

CUT TO:

7 INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

7

Top shot of AGATHA and DRACULA at the chess board, in the strange curving architecture of the room.

AGATHA
You were travelling openly with the passengers?

DRACULA
It's four weeks to England. What did you think I was going to do - lie around in a box? I enjoy company. I like people

AGATHA
Then why do you kill them?

DRACULA
Why do you pick flowers?

Over this, knock, knock.

CUT TO:

8 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR OF CABINS - NIGHT.

8

Piotr is at the door to Cabin Number Nine. Portmann appears behind him.

PORTMANN
No. Don't disturb. S...sick passenger.

PIOTR Sick?

PORTMANN
Came on board last night apparently. Rare disease. Only the Captain is allowed to s...see them.

PIOTR
Why the Captain.

PORTMANN
He is known to have a strong s...stomach. Off about your business.

PIOTR
Yes sir.

He hurries off.

Portmann lingers a moment, looking at the closed door of Cabin Nine. He presses his ear to it.

There's something, so faint. What is that - laboured, stertorous breathing?

DRACULA
Do you make a habit of listening at doors?

Portmann, startles. From nowhere, Dracula is standing directly behind him.

PORTMANN
S...sorry, sir.

DRACULA
Oh, I'm not making judgments. Your accent ... Bavarian, is it?

PORTMANN
Yes, s...sir.

DRACULA
(As if nostalgic for a fine wine.)
Bavaria. It's been a while.
(Recovers)
Forgive me. I blame the sea air - it makes one ... ravenous.

He sweeps off. Portmann glances back to cabin door.

The numeral 9 - a fly is crawling over it.

CUT TO:

9 EXT. SEA - NIGHT.

9

At the prow, like a carved figure head - DRACULA, a look of triumph in his eyes. He's on his way to the new world - at last. He sucks in a lungful of the delicious sea air -

- but when puffs it out it becomes a smoky mist ...

CUT TO:

10 EXT. SEA - NIGHT

10

The Demeter at sea, a little time later. The ship is now wreathed in fog.

Old Valentin prowling along the deck. He peers at the fog, which clings to the masts, like a shroud. Frowns. Clearly thinks this is unnatural.

Something bumps against his foot. A dead seagull. He picks it up tosses it overboard -

- and then notices three more dead seagulls lying ahead of him, as if they have dropped, stone dead, from the air.

11 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. GALLEY - NIGHT.

11

OLGAREN is drinking from a bottle of vodka with his one good hand. With his spiked hand, he's stirring a massive, blackened pot.

PIOTR is trying to help.

PIOTR
Maybe Paprika.

OLGAREN
(snorts)
New at sea, are you? You won't last. Your kind never do.

PIOTR
What's my kind?

OLGAREN
I dunno. Where you from?

PIOTR Bistriz.

OLGAREN

Ah. Romanian. Like the second mate.

Spits on the floor.

PIOTR

What's wrong with the second mate?

OLGAREN

Romanian.

Piotr, momentarily thrown. Decides to press on with his attempt to bond.

PIOTR

I always wanted to go to sea -

OLGAREN

Boring.

PIOTR

I thought I'd never get out of that stupid little town.

OLGAREN

Still boring.

PIOTR

- but nothing ever happened. Till now. And here I am.

OLGAREN

Yes! Here you are boring me! From Romania!

PIOTR

Sorry.

Unexpectedly, he offers the boy the bottle of vodka.

OLGAREN

Here, drink this, it will stop your mouth.

Piotr raises the vodka tentatively to his lips.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

The way you tell your story - you know what it sounds like?

PIOTR

Sir?

OLGAREN

A story.

Piotr practically chokes on it.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

Did you like it?

PIOTR

Needs paprika.

Olgaren looks at him, taken aback - bursts out laughing.
Kid's got attitude. Likes him.

Pulling back from the two of them, now laughing together, bonding -

- to see Dracula, idly watching from the corridor. He smiles, and for a moment it's as if he'd enjoyed their conversation -

OLGAREN

Ring the bell, boy! Dinner time.

On Dracula - he quite agrees. Smacks his lips.

CUT TO:

12

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. PASSENGER LOUNG/DINING ROOM - NIGHT. 12

The dining room which doubles as the passenger lounge (tables are put out at mealtimes.) Its shabby glamour resembles that of the GRAND DUCHESS VALERYIA who sits at a table - alone.

LORD RUTHVEN, without Dorabella, is dressed in funereal black. He catches sight of his own reflection in the cutlery.
He likes what he sees. Preen.

ADISA is standing by his table, sniffing an open bottle of wine with obvious disdain.

He grabs a passing sailor - ABRAMOFF - who's as close as the Demeter gets to a waiter.

ADISA

You. What is this muck?

ABRAMOFF

Sir?

ADISA

Take it back. It will not do.

ABRAMOFF
 (to Lord Ruthven)
 I'm sure we can find a better vintage for your Master -

ADISA
 Not for him! For me. I want only the finest.

SHARMA
 Then you're on the wrong ship.

Adisa turns. DR SHARMA glances up from his soup. His daughter YAMINI sits by his side.

SHARMA (CONT'D)
 (smirks) Motley collection, aren't we?
 (Off Adisa's affronted look) Including me.
 (Smiles, laughs)
 Especially me.

Adisa also laughs. Sharma holds out his hand.

SHARMA (CONT'D)
 I am Dr Sharma.

ADISA
 Good for you.

SHARMA
 (of Lord Ruthven)
 Forgive me, are you in this gentleman's employ?

LORD RUTHVEN
 He is my man.

SHARMA
 Hm.

ADISA
 He pays my wages. Not the same thing.

SHARMA
 Then you have settled a dispute!

He 'signs' to his daughter. Adisa frowns.

SHARMA (CONT'D)
 Deaf and dumb.

ADISA
 Poor child.

SHARMA
 (shrugs)
 She has eyes, though. Oh yes.

Yamini looks at Adisa and signs something. Sharma laughs.

SHARMA (CONT'D)
 She likes you. She has an eye for a handsome fellow.

Adisa still has his hands on Abramoff.

ADISA
 Very well. Bring your finest vintage.

Embarrassed, Ruthven takes Adisa's arm.

LORD RUTHVEN
 Adisa!

He pulls Adisa aside.

LORD RUTHVEN (CONT'D)
 (sotto)
 Please don't cause a scene. This marriage is a necessary evil, you know that.

ADISA
 Just don't call me your man. It hurts.

Anguished stares.

On The Grand Duchess - she is studying a grubby menu through a pair of lorgnette spectacles. She sighs.

DRACULA (O.S.)
 I think it's probably safe to have the fish.

The Grand Duchess looks up.

DRACULA is standing by her table, smiling kindly and looking devastating in evening wear - white bow tie, tail coat. The full Lugosi.

DUCHESS
 I beg your pardon?

DRACULA

We're surrounded by water. One must hope the fish is fresh.

DUCHESS

(smiles)

I'm afraid I'm very careful what I eat.

DRACULA

Me too. Are you dining alone tonight?

DUCHESS

Tonight - and every night. Since my husband passed on.

DRACULA

That is a great pity. One might even say, a terrible waste. May I join you?

The Duchess is vaguely scandalised. But a little thrilled.

DUCHESS

We haven't been introduced.

She cocks her head as she looks at him. Faint puzzlement.

DUCHESS (CONT'D)

And yet... you do seem a little familiar.

DRACULA

I promise, dear lady, to be as familiar as you like.

The Duchess flushes. Recovers.

DUCHESS

I am the Grand Duchess Valeryia of Augsburg.

DRACULA

I am Count Dracula. Of Wallachia.

He takes the seat opposite her.

DUCHESS

Do you travel for business or pleasure, Count Dracula?

DRACULA

Oh...A little of one and I hope a lot of the other. I have recently purchased a house in England. I hope to make it my home.

DUCHESS

There's more to a home than bricks and mortar.

DRACULA

Oh indeed. But I wish to use England as a base from which to further explore. I want to see the wide world. Taste it.

DUCHESS

I envy you. My exploring days are long gone.

DRACULA

Yet you're travelling now...?

DUCHESS

I have been invited.

DRACULA

Oh?

DUCHESS

I am connected by birth to the ruling house of Bavaria. But, alas, I am not in favour. A gentleman in England wishes to write up the story of my life.

DRACULA

I see.

DUCHESS

And Mr Blore ...pays.

DRACULA

(Slightly nettled)

Is it perhaps Mr Balaur?

DUCHESS

Yes, Balaur, that's it, the writer. Have you heard of him?

DRACULA

In passing.

DUCHESS

I know it's vulgar. But I have seen my way of life and my fortune wither like a frost-ravaged vine.
And so...

(in German)

Here you find me. Rattling around in this leaky coffin like a dried old pea.

On Dracula: a rare embarrassment. He doesn't understand her words.

DRACULA

Forgive me. My German is a little rusty -

(Breaks off, remembers)

Would you excuse me for a moment?

He gets up from the table, bows and glides out.

CUT TO:

13

EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT.

13

PORTMANN is at the ship's wheel, keeping her on course, in the foggy night. The moon is dully visible through the miasma.

Portmann leans back his head, adjusts his red neckerchief and gazes up at the milky light from the full moon.

After a moment, he becomes aware that he is not alone.

He looks round. There's DRACULA a few feet away from him, emerging through the wreaths of vapour.

PORTMANN

Good evening, s...sir.

DRACULA

Keep looking at the moon. I have no wish to disturb you.

A little nervously - aware that somehow he has been ordered - Portmann looks up the moon. Dracula's shadow grows over him, as he approaches -

DRACULA (CONT'D)

It spoils the flavour.

CUT TO:

14

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. DINING ROOM - NIGHT.

14

- ADISA, draining a glass of wine. He sighs, contentedly. A good vintage. He dabs his mouth with a napkin -

- just as DRACULA walks past him, also dabbing his mouth with a napkin.

The DUCHESS looks up as DRACULA rejoins her.

DRACULA

(in German: subtitled)

I'm sorry. That took a little longer than I expected. It's a fine night. A beautiful moon.

The Duchess is startled.

DUCHESS

(in German)

But your German...your German is excellent.

DRACULA

(in English)

You're too kind. I s...s...s...

He stammers briefly then masters himself.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I seem to have remembered more than I thought. It is good to...refresh oneself.

CUT TO:

15

INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

15

Sister Agatha looks reprovingly at Dracula.

AGATHA

You killed a crew member just so you could show off in German? Isn't that a little wasteful.

DRACULA

His charming Bavarian accent was the only interesting thing about him.

AGATHA

But you left no one at the wheel. Do you have no self control?

On Dracula's face: she's scored a point. With a smile, she takes a chess piece.

DUCHESS (V.O.)
You're very wicked.

CUT TO:

16

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. PASSENGER LOUNGE/DINING ROOM - NIGHT. 16

DRACULA
It has been said.
(Pours wine)
You were telling me of your estate.
Of the old days...

DUCHESS
Yes, indeed. My father was cousin to the Kaiser. And we would often visit Court. Ah, they were days like no other. The summers so, so hot. The winters...oh, such parties. In my mind I cannot distinguish between the shimmer of diamonds and the glitter of the icicles that hung off our sleds. So much light! For my eighteenth birthday I was given a great treat.
You will never guess what it was.
Go on. Guess.

DRACULA
I don't know.

DUCHESS Guess!

DRACULA
A jewelled tiara.

DUCHESS
(shakes her head)
Mother led me down the great staircase. I could feel my heart thumping in my breast. It was Christmas too, you see. My birthday falls very close to Christmas.
Guess again.

DRACULA
A white pony. To pull that sleigh of yours.

DUCHESS

(giggles)

No, no. I was led into the ballroom. Mama took my hands and I reached out. My present was wrapped in tissue paper. Pink tissue paper. Tightly wrapped. And I tore and tore at it in my excitement. And then I could stand the suspense no more and I pulled off my blindfold and saw what it was.

Beat.

DRACULA

A pineapple.

The smile is wiped off the Duchess' face.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

A pineapple in the depths of that freezing winter. It must have seemed like magic. Transported from the Kaiser's own hothouse like a precious jewel.

DUCHESS

(Stares and stares at him)

I knew it. It's impossible but I knew it. It's you.

DRACULA

Of course it's me. Oh, Valeryia, how we danced.

DUCHESS

Yes.

Beat.

DUCHESS (CONT'D)

It was the night my mother disappeared...

DRACULA

Yes.

DUCHESS

Who are you?

DRACULA

(Rises to his feet)

Shall we dance again?

He puts out his hand.

DUCHESS
Who are you?

DRACULA
Who would you like me to be?

17 INT. DREAM DANCE - NIGHT 17

Taking his hand, she rises - but now she is an eighteen year old girl again.

Candles, spinning round us as music plays.

On Dracula, his face pressed into her hair.

On the young Duchess as she presses her face into his shoulder.

The two of them are spinning on the spot in a surreal whirl of light and music.

CUT TO:

18 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SOKOLOV'S CABIN - DAWN. 18

SOKOLOV's cabin is neat and ordered. The Captain is asleep in his bunk. The ship lurches violently to one side...

CUT TO:

19 INT. DREAM DANCE - NIGHT 19

Close on the young DUCHESS's fingers as she grips more tightly on to DRACULA's hand.

On Dracula, as his mouth moves closer to her neck...

CUT TO:

20 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SOKOLOV'S CABIN - DAWN. 20

The ship lurches again, waking SOKOLOV. For a moment he's dazed. Another lurch - and Sokolov curses as he clambers into his boots.

CUT TO:

OLD VALENTIN

Why can't we get clear of this fog?
It's like it's following us.

PIOTR

Sorry, sir but we didn't look everywhere.

SOKOLOV

What do you mean?

PIOTR

Well, we didn't look in cabin number nine, sir. Your orders.

SOKOLOV

... Yes, of course. You did right not to disturb our invalid. But no-one's likely to be hiding in there, are they?

ABRAMOFF appears from below, flustered.

ABRAMOFF

Sir, one of the passengers! The Grand Duchess.

SOKOLOV

What about her?

ABRAMOFF

We can't find her either..

On Piotr, troubled by this. He shivers, glances round the deck -

- and notices, hanging from the rigging, a dead seagull.

CUT TO:

26

INT. 'THE DEMETER' - CORRIDOR OF CABINS. DAY.

26

The locked door of cabin number nine. Moving closer on the door.

The ship creaks, sways - but under this we hear the ragged, painful breathing.

CUT TO:

27

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. PASSENGER LOUNGE/DINING ROOM - DAY. 27

Sunlight struggles with the fog at the grubby windows.

The passengers are assembled, including DRACULA. He sits a little apart, in the shadows. Only DORABELLA is absent.

SHARMA is drinking a glass of tea and playing Patience. YAMINI sits by his side, watchful.

In another chair, LORD RUTHVEN is getting quietly drunk.

SOKOLOV stands before them. There is the terrible silence that follows bad news.

SOKOLOV

A proper enquiry will, of course, be conducted once we reach England.
I remain at your disposal at all times. Good afternoon.

He exits.

LORD RUTHVEN

Isn't it thrilling! Thrillingly strange, I mean. One would be so bored otherwise.

Sharma eyes Ruthven's hand - shaking.

SHARMA

Hm.

DRACULA

It's true - danger has its seductions.

Ruthven looks at him - and Dracula holds his gaze. A definite moment.

Adisa witnesses this - breaks the spell.

ADISA

Two people gone in one night. Was the sea particularly rough?

SHARMA

I don't know. I am a heavy sleeper.

LORD RUTHVEN

I didn't notice.
(winks)
Far too busy.

Sharma just eyes him again.

SHARMA

Hm.

DRACULA

(Still eyeing Ruthven)

I'm a night owl myself.

(To the others)

And where is your wife, my Lord?

She's not joining us?

LORD RUTHVEN

Dorabella is a little - how shall I put it?

(A smirking boast)

She's quite exhausted, poor thing.

DRACULA

Dorabella. What an enchanting name.

Dorabella...It lingers on the tongue! Why would you spend your time up here with us, when Dorabella lies below?

Dracula holds his gaze, cocks his head. It's not a rhetorical question - he knows something is not right here, and he is probing Ruthven's discomfort.

LORD RUTHVEN

One can have too much of a good thing.

DRACULA

On the contrary. I have always found that too much is exactly enough.

(Aware he's got an audience now and playing them.)

Desire, for me, is like diving into a pool of dark, dark water. Black as pitch. Frightening. But the water is warm. Welcoming. And so you dive deeper and deeper.

(Now fixing on Lord Ruthven)

And soon you know that you've reached the limit of your breath. You must turn back now or it'll be too late. But you dive on.

(MORE)

DRACULA (CONT'D)

You open your mouth, slowly at first, and then wide, letting the warm black water flood into you, thick as molasses. Consuming you utterly. Utterly.

Lord Ruthven, transfixed.

Adisa, quietly horrified.

LORD RUTHVEN

Yes. Yes, I know exactly what you mean.

A beat of silence.

SHARMA

Hm.

His timing and the evident scepticism makes everybody laugh. Dracula joins in.

DRACULA

(Laughs - to Sharma)

Oh thank God, I thought you were all taking me seriously.

On a suddenly humiliated Ruthven - he joins in the laughter a little too late and a little too loudly -

- and then startles, glances down.

Under the table, Dracula's hand on his knee -

- and Dracula is holding his look with fierce intensity, as if he meant ever word of what he said - a moment of blatant seduction. Then the smile switches back on.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Anyway. A great pity about the Duchess!

A general murmuring of agreement. Dracula sighs with a genuine sense of fondness.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Too young. Far too young.

They all stare at him. What??

CUT TO:

OLGAREN

(laughs)

Jesus, this is too easy. Get away now.

He boots Piotr up the arse good-naturedly. Piotr leaves, still not quite sure where he stands.

On Olgaren, alone for a moment, the vessel creaking around him. A fly buzzes past him, he vaguely swats at it -

- and a shadow falls over him.

Olgaren startles, looks up -

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

Oh! Didn't know you were here!

OLD VALENTIN is standing over him.

OLD VALENTIN

Not sure about that boy.

OLGAREN

He's a good lad, really.

OLD VALENTIN

You think?

OLGAREN

Well...Romanian.

OLD VALENTIN

Maybe he's brought the bad luck. A Jonah.

OLGAREN

Or it could be the second mate.

OLD VALENTIN

Why?

OLGAREN

Romanian.

OLD VALENTIN

Yes. But there's women. It's usually women who bring the bad luck.

OLGAREN (Pleased with their progress)

(MORE)

OLGAREN (CONT'D)
Well, that's half the ship we've managed to accuse. Anyone else?

OLD VALENTIN
Rest of the passengers?

OLGAREN
Yeah. Passengers!

They both spit on the floor - and laugh together.

As the laugh subsides, Olgaren is frowning.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)
Seven of them. Seven passengers on the Demeter.

They look at each other. The laughter is over because they know this is odd.

CUT TO:

30 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT. 30

ABRAMOFF is at the wheel. It's a warm night. Sultry, but still the fog persists, heavy and miasmic.

There is a movement behind him. He looks quickly round - no one there. Clearly he is a little jumpy.

CUT TO:

31 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. LORD RUTHVEN'S CABIN - NIGHT. 31

DORABELLA and LORD RUTHVEN are asleep in bed. Dorabella opens her eyes and sighs. Too hot to sleep ...

CUT TO:

32 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SHARMA'S CABIN - NIGHT. 32

Little YAMINI is asleep in her bunk.

SHARMA is sitting brooding at the desk. In public, he's gentle and funny. But in private he's a traumatised man - a shadow has fallen over a soul.

With trembling he touches his scar, remembering. Jump cuts:

FLASH: In Sharma's lab, three men turning from the scratches in coffin lid. This time we see what they saw ...

A rotting creature rising from the coffin. With shocking speed, it spins its terrible head to look at us.

Now, agile as a monkey, it's leaping at us -

- it slashes Sharma's face with its black nails -

- Gupta lies dead on the floor, Khan is struggling in the creature's grasp -

- Sharma, bleeding-faced, racing for the door - looking back briefly at the snaring, slobbering monstrosity -

At his desk, Sharma breaks out of his reverie. He looks bleakly at the desk before him.

Standing there, side by side, like alternatives -

- a glass of whiskey and blue ridged bottle.

His eyes flick between them. He reaches for the blue bottle with shaking hand -

- but then looks to his sleeping daughter.

No!

He takes the blue bottle, shoves it to the bottom of his medical bag. Downs the whiskey in one.

He goes and sits on the end of Yamini's bed.

SHARMA

There are monsters in this world, Yamini. Creatures that will leave a shadow on your soul, if once you let them in. I will never let them take you - I swear it.

Behind him, a shadow flickers past the window.

CUT TO:

33

EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT

33

ABRAMOFF still steers. Less jumpy now, more relaxed.

We cut to another shot of him, handheld, from the POV of someone approaching him from behind ...

... right up to his shoulder.

He senses something, turns.

It's Dorabella.

DORABELLA
Good evening.

Abramoff: oh! He drinks in the sight of her in her negligee.
All his dreams at once.

ABRAMOFF
You...you shouldn't be here, Ma'am.
Captain's orders.

DORABELLA
It's so warm down there. Where are we?

ABRAMOFF
Just off the coast of Greece.

DORABELLA
May I take a turn round the deck.

ABRAMOFF
Please, just be careful, ma'am.

DORABELLA
(smiles)
I'll be careful.

She walks on - towards the prow of the ship. Abramoff - standing on the raised wheelhouse platform near the stern - watches her as she passes in and out of the moonlight and mist. So beautiful. He sighs to himself...

ABRAMOFF
Don't dream, don't dream ...

On Dorabella. Straining to see through the mist to the stars above..

DRACULA (O.S.)
Warm night, isn't it?

Dorabella almost jumps out of her skin. Standing right next to her is DRACULA.

DORABELLA
(startled)
My God!

DRACULA
Hmm. No. I can make no such claims.

Dorabella laughs. Dracula smiles. Discreetly he glances over to where Abramoff is at the wheel. He and Dorabella are in sight, though in the shadows. Abramoff is not currently looking at them.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I'm sorry, we haven't met. I'm Count Dracula.

DORABELLA

Lady Ruthven.

(laughs)

That still sounds so funny! I've just got married, you see.

DRACULA

Oh that's wonderful! It's so important to have someone at your side, as the years go by. And, after all, how few years go up to make a century.

(Pulls a face)

That must have sounded rather cryptic? Sorry.

He gazes at her. Dorabella almost blushes - and remembers her position.

DORABELLA

You know, really, I shouldn't be alone with you like this. My husband tells me two people have disappeared.

DRACULA

And here we are. Two people.

Another glance towards Abramoff and the wheelhouse (he's always aware of the possibility of being observed.)

DORABELLA

(quickly)

I've not been well, I'm afraid. The sea...it makes me feel wretched. But I'm better tonight.

DRACULA

No.

She looks at him.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Tonight you are superb. Your husband is a lucky man.

DORABELLA
 Certainly he is!

They both laugh. Dracula steals another look at Abramoff - still paying them no heed.

DORABELLA (CONT'D)
 But I'm lucky too. He's so handsome. And there'll be children! We'll have lots of children!
 (Laughs embarrassed)
 It must sound terribly ordinary to a man like you - talk of children.

DRACULA
 To a man like me, it sounds like a miracle. Everyone needs a legacy. Otherwise - you're just existing.

He looks out to sea - and for a moment there is genuine sadness in his face. He catches himself in this - almost embarrassed.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
 Dear me. Something about you positively demands ...
 (His eyes flick to her neck)
 ... intimacy. I was right about the sea air.

Unconsciously, he starts tapping a finger on the rail.

DORABELLA
 I know what you mean. I wonder if newly married ladies should really be conversing on intimate matters with handsome strangers?

DRACULA
 I see no harm in it. Unless it happens to be a dangerous handsome stranger.

DORABELLA
 Are you dangerous?

DRACULA
 Oh yes. Terribly dangerous.

DORABELLA
 Like one of those exotic noblemen one reads about in the novels?
 (MORE)

DORABELLA (CONT'D) Filled with all the mystery and wickedness of the East?

DRACULA
 Yes.

He just stares at her, not releasing her gaze. She struggles to resume the conversation, ends up blurting out -

DORABELLA
 We're going to America!

DRACULA
 Oh, indeed?

DORABELLA
 A new world. A new life.

DRACULA
 That's a pity.

DORABELLA
 Why?

DRACULA
 I'm a vampire.

DORABELLA
 ... sorry, what? What did you say?

DRACULA
 Look in the mirror.

DORABELLA
 What mirror?

DRACULA
 Oh, one can always find a mirror, if one tries.

He takes her arm, and leads her a couple of steps round one of the deck structures, towards a water barrel. It's only a few feet away, but this has the effect of moving them out Abramoff's eye-line.

He lifts the lid off the barrel they're now standing next to.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
 There.

Dorabella glances down into the pellucid reflection. In the moonlight, her shimmering image looks back at her.
 (Throughout this, Dracula specifically avoids seeing his reflection.)

But Dorabella looks different. She's wearing fine new clothes and is heavily pregnant. She looks prosperous and happy. LORD RUTHVEN is by her side along with another child.

DORABELLA

That's...how do you do that...?

DRACULA

Mirrors are a deeper and more dangerous magic than most people understand. Mirrors can give us space to imagine - or worse, show us the truth.

DORABELLA

What do you see in the mirror?

DRACULA

Oh...much. I thought you deserved at least a glimpse of what might have been.

DORABELLA

Might have been? Why are you saying that?

DRACULA

(Smiles, sadly)

I told you, lovely Dorabella. I'm a vampire.

CUT TO:

34

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SHARMA'S CABIN - NIGHT.

34

YAMINI opens her eyes.

Something wrong.

Splash.

Something has dropped from the cabin ceiling onto her cheek.

She puts her hand to her face - it comes away, bloodied.

She reacts.

Splash.

Another drop of blood.

She moves the lit candle closer, looks up.

A hideous stain of crimson is blossoming over the ceiling.

CUT TO:

35 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT

35

On Abramoff, at the wheel. He glances along the ship. Frowns. Can't see Dorabella. Cranes to look. Not there.

Disquieted now. Should he go and look? Yes - this ship is not safe right now. He quickly ties off the wheel, heads down to where he last saw Dorabella ...

As he approaches the structure (the one we know is concealing Dracula and Dorabella) he comes to halt -

- from the shadows, a rhythmic, ragged breathing. And little orgasmic gasps, clearly female.

Abramoff comes to a halt. Pain on his face. So disappointed in this perfect angel.

With a last wounded look, slinks back to the wheel.

The camera drifts back towards the deck structure, on past the terrible shadow of Dracula crouched over his victim - the dreadful snorting and slobbering - and then, as if the shot is over, we drift on past -

- to end on little YAMINI, now standing on deck, eyes wide as she watches.

And Yamini screams. An endless, silent scream...

CUT TO:

36 INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

36

DRACULA and SISTER AGATHA at the chessboard.

AGATHA

Pig.

DRACULA

I'm sorry?

AGATHA

Four weeks to England - and you'd polished off three people in two nights. Like a fox in a hen coop.

DRACULA

Like a connoisseur in a wine cellar.

(Gesturing round)

One chooses one's vintages with care - the reds, the whites. I enjoy both. The duchess and the deckhand.

AGATHA

But you're careful with your diet.

DRACULA

I have to be. Or I would reach England with the social skills of a Russian sailor.

AGATHA

And yet you were gorging yourself. Fox, hen coop.

DRACULA

Pig, truffles.

AGATHA

At this rate, you'd have no one left to sail the ship.

DRACULA

I knew I could get by with a skeleton crew. I've worked with those before.

CUT TO:

37

EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - DAWN.

37

Again the ship rolls in the heavy swell as the fog swirls around it.

CLOSE on the decking. The grooves worked into the wood.

And, running along the grooves like oil in an engine - thick, glutinous blood.

SOKOLOV's face is close to the deck. He gazes in horror at the blood. Around him: ABRAMOFF, SHARMA, ADISA and LORD RUTHVEN.

Abramoff is particularly stricken, but fighting to hide it.

ABRAMOFF

She said she was too warm. I told her to be careful.

SOKOLOV

And you saw nothing?

ABRAMOFF

I ... heard something.

SOKOLOV

Heard what?

Abramoff glances briefly at Lord Ruthven, and then comes out with it. Red faced, hating this.

ABRAMOFF

... I think ... she was with a man.

LORD RUTHVEN

No!

ADISA

Are you sure?

ABRAMOFF

I'm sure!

Adisa flashes a concerned look at Ruthven - not sure what to say.

LORD RUTHVEN

How could she be with a man?? I was in my cabin.

An awkward silence.

SHARMA

Hm.

LORD RUTHVEN

No, this is preposterous! Where is she?? What has happened to my wife??

DRACULA

(From off)

Surely it's obvious, gentlemen.

They look round. DRACULA has been observing from the shadows (NB keeping him out of sun) now wearing a stylish pair of blue spectacles. He has never looked more dashing and byronic - Sherlock Holmes on the case.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
 There is a killer on board this ship!

CUT TO:

38

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. PASSENGER LOUNGE - DAY.

38

SOKOLOV, DRACULA, LORD RUTHVEN, ADISA, OLD VALENTIN, OLGAREN, PIOTR, ABRAMOFF, SHARMA and YAMINI.

We start on Yamini - she is pale and trembling, a traumatised child. She is staring at Dracula, who is pacing and sombre: a detective at work on the case.

LORD RUTHVEN is finding solace in a bottle of wine.

The rest are in mid row.

OLGAREN
 What about Lisbon?

ABRAMOFF
 Lisbon's two days away.

SOKOLOV
 We go on! To England! And double the watch. No-one is to walk the decks alone. Understood?

ABRAMOFF
 Aye, sir.

SOKOLOV
 As Count Dracula says, we are forced to assume there is a murderer among us. We can, I fear, place no trust anywhere. Be alone with no one.

An exchange of glances among the passengers. The mood has changed. Paranoia has begun.

Yamini has shrunk against her father, clinging to his arm, her eyes still on Dracula.

DRACULA
 Now, young lady, you seem particularly upset. Did you see something which alarmed you?

SHARMA

She can't hear you. She only understands sign language.

DRACULA

Ah! That is a language I must acquire some time.

His dark eyes, ravenous on her.

Yamini doesn't understand his words - but she gets the message.

OLD VALENTIN

You're all fooling yourselves!
"For fools speak folly. Their hearts are bent on evil!" Isaiah, 32:6. This is more than murder - there is evil at work here. Look out there! Look at it. What sort of fog follows a ship?

DRACULA

I agree there's evil at work. But surely it's a very human evil.

OLD VALENTIN

Three people are dead!

DRACULA

Three people are missing.

OLD VALENTIN

And where did they go? Did they sprout wings and fly away?

DRACULA

(smiles)
 What a ridiculous idea.

OLD VALENTIN

Dark forces!

LORD RUTHVEN

Those dark forces took my Dorabella.

He sobs into his handkerchief. Dracula steps over to him, places a hand on his. It is clearly intended to be comforting

-

- but when their eyes meet, the seduction is clearly continuing.

On Adisa, clocking this - barely suppressed rage.

Then just as abruptly, Dracula gets back to business.

DRACULA

I find it hard to credit that any supernatural entity would leave such a quantity of blood behind - unless, of course, it had drunk its fill. So! There is a killer on board, in plain sight or hiding.

On Sokolov - he needs to take the initiative from Dracula.

SOKOLOV

We'll search everywhere. No one can stay hidden long on a ship this size. From now on, you will consider yourself under my command.

DRACULA

Quite right, Captain. I stand ready to serve, as do we all.

SOKOLOV

Abramoff - you will take -

DRACULA

Perhaps we should start with cabin number nine?

A beat on Sokolov - damn him!

SOKOLOV

There is nothing of consequence in there.

DRACULA

Nevertheless, I'm sure it would set all our minds at rest if we were just to take a little look? Since we are all obliged to suspect everyone - including you, Captain Sokolov - I see no need to exclude the passenger in Number 9.

Sokolov seethes. Who is in charge here?

SOKOLOV

Very well. Cabin nine will be searched.

(Beat)

By me.

On Dracula - trace of a cynical smile.

DRACULA

Then I suppose we shall have to trust you.

He glances significantly round all the others. The paranoia is ratcheting up.

CUT TO:

39 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - DAY.

39

The sun, like a dull gold coin in the foggy sky.

The ship is alive with search teams, emptying barrels, hauling back heavy canvasses, unspooling rope.

Thump!

A crewman looks round. Another gull has dropped dead to the deck.

CUT TO:

40 INT. 'THE DEMETER' - CORRIDOR OF CABINS. DAY.

40

Starting on the numeral 9, pulling out to:

SOKOLOV is outside Cabin number nine.

ABRAMOFF and OLGAREN are with him, like a delegation.

Sokolov takes out a big bunch of keys and, after a moment, opens the door.

Olgaren gags.

OLGAREN

The stench!

SOKOLOV

The sick room is not a place for weak stomachs. Stay where you are!

He goes inside, leaving the others in the corridor.

CUT TO:

41 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. HOLD - DAY.

41

Craaaaack!

SHARMA, ADISA, OLD VALENTIN and DRACULA have levered open the lid of several of the fifty boxes.

Valentin sticks his wrinkled hand into the mouldy earth within and sieves through it.

DRACULA

Seems to be just common or garden soil.

SHARMA

It's not Fuller's earth or anything like that...

DRACULA

Of course. You're a scientist.

SHARMA

University of Calcutta. Or I was. Are you perhaps a scientist yourself?

DRACULA

I have an appetite for it.

OLD VALENTIN

(grunts)

Science doesn't know everything.

SHARMA

Hm.

OLD VALENTIN

(to Adisa)

What you reckon about all this? You must've seen some strange things in your time.

ADISA

Ah. Now we come to it. 'Ask the savage.' He'll know. He sees round corners.

OLD VALENTIN

Well, it's true isn't it? All that black magic your people get up to?

ADISA (Rolls his eyes)
 My people!

CUT TO:

42 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR OF CABINS - DAY. 42

ABRAMOFF and OLGAREN, waiting outside number 9. Olgaren has his ear pressed to the door.

ABRAMOFF
 What can you hear?

OLGAREN Breathing.

ABRAMOFF
 The Captain's?

OLGAREN
 No.

CUT TO:

43 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - DAY. 43

PIOTR is searching. He's reached the rum barrel. A thought! Is it big enough to hide someone? He reaches to open it.

DRACULA
 (From off)
 Have you ever heard of Nelson,
 Piotr?

Piotr startles. And there's Dracula, leaning against the wall, keeping to the shadow, again wearing his blue spectacles (he always wears this when outside in day time.)

PIOTR Nelson, sir?

DRACULA
 Britisher. Saw off Napoleon.

Piotr looks blank.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
 One eye, one arm? No?
 (shakes his head)
 Young people. How soon they forget.

He starts to tap the barrel with the flat of his hand.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Well, Admiral Nelson was killed at the Battle of Trafalgar, you see. Died of his wounds - - they say. And they wanted to get his corpse back to England with all speed. National hero. The British are very keen on that kind of thing. But Spain's quite a way. And it was hot. So...what do you think they did?

Piotr shrugs.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

They put the old Admiral into a barrel of rum to preserve him!

PIOTR

No!

DRACULA

True. Trouble is...

He taps the barrel again.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

They didn't tell the crew. And when they got home, turned out those thirsty sailors had been helping themselves to a drop or two all the way back to Portsmouth...

With deliberation - enjoying Piotr's discomfiture - Dracula slowly prises open the lid of the barrel. The rum inside glints in the sunshine.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I'm sure it had quite a kick that rum.

(withdraws his hand)

Well. No corpses in there.

He replaces the lid. Piotr looks dubiously at him.

PIOTR

Thank you, Count Dracula. I'm so new to this. I don't think I'm much use to anyone.

DRACULA

Piotr. I met a Piotr - once. Your accent. Bistritz, is it?

PIOTR

Yes.

DRACULA

Ah! A taste of home.

(Licks his fingers)

This, on the other hand - flavourless!

CUT TO:

44 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR OF CABINS - DAY.

44

SOKOLOV emerges from cabin number nine.

ABRAMOFF

Well, sir?

SOKOLOV

(shrugs)

All as before. The passenger remains very sick. And there's no-one else in the cabin. I searched it thoroughly. Does that satisfy you?

OLGAREN

The Captain's word is good enough for me.

At last, Abramoff nods.

ABRAMOFF

And me.

(Eyes Sokolov)

For now.

Sokolov: injured, but the point is fair.

SOKOLOV

(V.O.)

Trust once lost -

CUT TO:

45 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT.

45

SOKOLOV addresses the crew and passengers.

SOKOLOV

- cannot easily be restored. I know that. But we've all searched this ship from prow to stern. There's no sign of our missing friends. We're all agreed?

The assembled murmur their assent.

DRACULA

Which means only one thing.

Beat.

SOKOLOV

I'm afraid so. It's one of us.

He looks around at the others. SHARMA, ADISA, LORD RUTHVEN.

SHARMA

It is clear what we must do. We must go on to England. Then we'll hand this matter over to the authorities. If we stick together and we're all careful - if no one is alone with anyone then we'll be - Whumpph!

Sharma jump backs as something smashes onto the deck before him.

It's ABRAMOFF. He's writhing in agony, one leg horribly broken.

Sokolov looks up.

SOKOLOV

Must've fallen from the moonrakers!
Jesus. Get him below!
(yelling) Fetch Valentin!

Blood pools from Abramoff's leg. Pan from Abramoff's leg to another dead seagull, recently fallen on the deck.

Sokolov looks back up. What the hell's going on up there?

Dracula, looking at the blood - shudders involuntarily. An ecstatic shiver.

DRACULA

Quickly...he's...bleeding.

Sokolov is already at Abramoff's side, tending to him. Shoots Dracula a sour look.

SOKOLOV

Step away, man - if you can't stand the sight of blood.

Dracula turns, and strides away - he can't let his agitation betray him. His weakness shames him.

CUT TO:

46 INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

46

DRACULA and AGATHA at the chess board.

Agatha is looking shrewdly at Dracula.

AGATHA

And you can't stand it, can you? You can't control yourself in the presence of blood. It's not just sustenance, it's an addiction.

Dracula smiles.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

You're smiling.

DRACULA

After four hundred years, it's nice to be understood.

AGATHA

Oh, I haven't understood you yet. Not completely. Seven very different passengers on the Demeter. How convenient given your dietary requirements.

Dracula smiles. She's getting there.

CUT TO:

47 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT.

47

Hand held camera chaos: fast, urgent!

OLGAREN and other crew carry the writhing ABRAMOFF into the cramped crew quarters. He's screaming in pain -

- OLD VALENTIN is already there, making preparations -

- Olgaren sweeping away metal dishes and spoons as they hoist Abramoff onto the big, stained mess table -

OLD VALENTIN
How could you fall? You of all people??

ABRAMOFF
It's the fog - it's like breathing poison.
(Winces in pain)
Fix it! Just FIX IT!

OLD VALENTIN
I can try and reset it. But it doesn't change anything - the devil is on the ship. The Devil!

ABRAMOFF
Do...do it!

Old Valentin has a piece of timber in one hand. He lays it by the side of Abramoff's broken leg and starts to wrap clean strips of fabric around it. Then prepares to tighten them.

OLD VALENTIN
Hold on to him.

Rams the peg in between Abramoff's jaws.

Then he gets to work.

Abramoff SCREEEEEEAAAAMS!

CUT TO:

48 INT. CORRIDOR OUTSIDE CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT. 48

On the opposite side of the door, the scream continues. We pull slowly back -

- to reveal, Dracula spread against the door, inhaling the scent of blood, lost to his craving. He is practically sobbing with frustration - like a rejected lover ...

CUT TO:

49 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. DINING ROOM - NIGHT. 49

ADISA and LORD RUTHVEN are in the dining room, waiting to be served. SHARMA is settling into his place.

SHARMA

It is difficult to eat in these circumstances, but one must keep body and soul together.

ADISA

(sotto)

"Dark forces took my Dorabella".
Your concern was almost convincing.

LORD RUTHVEN

(sotto)

She was a sweet child. The sweet rarely survive long.

ADISA

(sotto)

But she served your purpose, didn't she? Bailing out your empty coffers.

LORD RUTHVEN

(sotto)

And yours, Adisa. Remember that. If any of us get out of this.

The door opens and DRACULA sweeps in. He moves urgently, lacks his normal poise and elegance.

Instantly, Ruthven turns his attention to Dracula - and Adisa seethes.

LORD RUTHVEN (CONT'D)

Good evening, Count Dracula.

(No reply)

Are you all right? I suppose we're all a little jumpy.

(No reply)

Not hungry?

Dracula shoots a look at him - Oh God he is!!

- and in his eyes there is that cat's eye glitter.

CUT TO:

50

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT.

50

ABRAMOFF is sleeping fitfully.

We pan down to his bloodily bandaged leg.

CUT TO:

On Dracula - silent, almost glowering. On finger tapping like a metronome on the table top. Tap. Tap. Tap.

LORD RUTHVEN
(Wincing at the wine)
What is this??

ADISA
You're worried about the wine?

LORD RUTHVEN
I'll worry about what I choose.

ADISA
Oh, are we are not drinking and dining in the style to which we hope to become accustomed?

Lord Ruthven looks sharply at him.

LORD RUTHVEN
We?

On Adisa: stung by that! What? He glances to Dracula. He's definitely being replaced in Ruthven's affections.

Dracula registers the look. His dark eyes drift to -

- Adisa's soft throat, the gentle pulse of his jugular. The metronome taps a little faster.

SHARMA
Olgaren, might I ask - do you normally have this many passengers?

OLGAREN
No. It is very strange. This is the most we've ever had. And the most wealthy.

SHARMA
Lord Ruthven ... as, I assume, the wealthiest, why did you choose this ship?

LORD RUTHVEN
It was a ... recommendation. From my business partner. I have a silent partner ...

OLGAREN
Who recommends the Demeter?

LORD RUTHVEN
I didn't think to question it.

OLGAREN
Why not?

ADISA
(A little twist of the knife)
Thanks to his partner's sponsorship Lord Ruthven had the funds and the position to woo Dorabella. Lord Ruthven didn't question anything.

Ruthven makes a gesture to Adisa, telling him to shut up - On Dracula: his eyes flash to -
- the blue veins in Ruthven's wrist. Tap, tap, tap, tap - Sharma is deep in thought, troubled now.

SHARMA
I received a job offer in England, and a sponsor for my medical researches. I faced ruin and disgrace in my homeland - my work was, shall we say, controversial - so I didn't think to question his stipulation that I travel on this ship.

Dracula's eyes now flash to the Sharma's jugular. Distantly we hear Ruthven continue.

LORD RUTHVEN
What does it matter? A ship is a ship. I'm sure Mr. Balaur has his reasons.

SHARMA
What did you say? Balaur?

LORD RUTHVEN
Yes. My silent partner.

SHARMA
And my sponsor.

They stare at one another.

ADISA
Well. That is quite a coincidence.

Dracula, in a daze of bloodlust - now his eyes flick to Adisa's jugular.

SHARMA

Count Dracula, do you have any connection with -

Slam! They startle. Dracula has suddenly shot to his feet, overturning his chair.

They all stare at him.

Dracula fights for control of himself - the beast is showing.

DRACULA

My apologies, gentlemen, I - ... If you'll excuse me.

He starts striding towards the exit.

OLGAREN

Don't you want to eat?

Dracula comes to a dead halt for a moment - his shoulders seem to flex - and he strides out of the room.

CUT TO:

55

INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

55

SISTER AGATHA and DRACULA.

AGATHA

Ah! The beast revealed. Wallowing in blood and stinking of grave dirt. The sophisticated gentleman nothing more than a veneer.

DRACULA

The sophistication of a gentleman is always a veneer.

AGATHA

Even a gentleman like Mr. Balaur?

DRACULA

Mister who?

AGATHA

(Sighs irritated)

Dracula: a corruption of the Latin dracul, meaning dragon.

(MORE)

AGATHA (CONT'D)

In Romanian - Balaur. The purpose of an alias seems to have eluded you.

DRACULA

I thought it was clever.

AGATHA

You'll have to be cleverer than that. To feed off the civilised, you will have to learn to live among them first.

(Triumphant - she's got it)

Ha!! The boat was a dress rehearsal for life in England. You stocked your larder, to teach yourself to dine with restraint.

DRACULA

Precisely.

AGATHA

And, Mr. Belaur, you were failing!

Joyfully, she takes a piece. The game will be hers!

CUT TO:

56

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT.

56

On ABRAMOFF: breathing fitfully. Groans.

Is that pain? No! It's pleasure.

His eyes flicker open.

Wider: DORABELLA is straddling him, making love to him.

ABRAMOFF

Ma'am?

DORABELLA

Hush.

ABRAMOFF

But ... I thought ...

DORABELLA

Hush now.

ABRAMOFF

You're dead.

DORABELLA
Everybody's dead in the end.

ABRAMOFF
I'm dreaming. This isn't real.

DORABELLA
Reality is overrated.

HARD CUT TO:

Overhead shot.

ABRAMOFF lies prone on the bed, blanket thrown back.

Covering him like a great black sail is DRACULA!

The vampire's mouth is clamped to Abramoff's throat:
feasting.

CUT TO:

57 INT. 'THE DEMETER' - CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT

57

Close on ABRAMOFF's eyes as they snap open.

Wider: he sees what is really happening - DRACULA spread over him, feasting. He screams, horrified.

ABRAMOFF
No! No! Pleeeeeease - !

He tries to throw Dracula off him but he's too weak.

He starts to scream.

DRACULA
(sighs)
Food should never answer back.
You're spoiling it for both of us.

With a quick, smooth movement he slits Abramoff's throat with his fingernail.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
Hush!

CUT TO:

58 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. PASSENGER LOUNGE/DINING ROOM - NIGHT. 58

LORD RUTHVEN, ADISA, DR SHARMA still at dinner. PIOTR serving.

CLANG! CLANG! CLANG!

The ship's bell.

They all look up, startled.

CUT TO:

59 INT. 'THE DEMETER' - CREW QUARTERS - NIGHT. 59

SOKOLOV, OLGAREN in the room, looking around in horror. ADISA and SHARMA appear in the doorway.

Abramoff is gone - and the room is like a butcher's shop.

OLGAREN

(appalled)

What normal man could have done this?

SOKOLOV

We need to search the ship again. I want the entire crew, in pairs -

PIOTR

(Arriving in the doorway)

I don't think that's going to be possible, sir.

SOKOLOV

It's possible if I give the order!

On Piotr. Now he's a frightened boy - with very bad news.

PIOTR

One of the lifeboats is missing. And I think most of the crew.

A beat on Sokolov - stunned.

SOKOLOV

But where could they go?

OLGAREN

Anywhere but here.

Sokolov, lost for words.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)
Sir - Yuri - it's time.

SOKOLOV
What are you talking about?

OLGAREN
We're running out of choices - we're running out of crew. Captain ... who is in cabin number nine?

CUT TO:

60 INT. WINE CELLAR - DAY

60

DRACULA and AGATHA at the chess board.

DRACULA
Have you worked it out yet? Please stop disappointing me.

Agatha glances down at the chess board.

AGATHA
(frowns)
When did I lose so many pieces? I was winning.

DRACULA
No. You've been losing from the beginning.

His wine glass slides of its own accord a little across the table. He pushes it back.

AGATHA
You don't drink.

DRACULA
Wine.

The room seems to sway a moment. Agatha puts her hand to her head, giddy for a moment. She looks at the chess game, as if desperate for something to focus on.

AGATHA
My pawn is well placed at least. If I can get it to the other side, it becomes another Queen.

DRACULA

Forget the chess, concentrate on the game. Who's in cabin number nine?

Agatha stares at him - hating not knowing. She looks around. A new thought chilling her.

AGATHA

How did I get here?

DRACULA

Don't you remember?

AGATHA

... we were in the convent. You let Mina go ...

DRACULA

But I didn't let you go, did I?

AGATHA

Where am I? What is this place?

DRACULA

Surely you know.

AGATHA

This is not real. None of this is real. Is this .. am I ...

DRACULA

Agatha, you haven't been properly awake since we left the convent.

She looks at his wine glass.

AGATHA

The people you feed from, you make them dream ...

DRACULA

The kiss of the vampire is an opiate.

AGATHA

Are you...drinking my blood?

DRACULA

You are exquisite, Agatha. So much, insight, wit, learning, wickedness even. One does not hurry such a vintage. I've been making you last.

AGATHA
... where am I?

A fly buzzes past her.

DRACULA
Oh, Agatha. You know where you are.

Agatha looking around. The strange curved walls of the wine cellar. Now pulling up and up from her -

- the whole wine cellar is in a shape of the numeral 9.

AGATHA
It's me. I'm in cabin number nine!

Dracula sets down the glass and in same movement -

CUT TO:

61 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CABIN NO.9 - NIGHT 61

- DRACULA rears into close-up, his gory mouth filling the frame.

Wider: Dracula is spread over Agatha, having feasted on her. The whole bed is drenched in blood. She is weak, pale and enfeebled.

The sound of keys jangling outside the door - someone is preparing to enter ...

Dracula looks to the door, registering this.

Calmly, he turns Agatha's face to the side, exposing the bleeding bite on her neck. He draws his finger across the wound, healing it into the same bruise we saw on Jonathan Harker's flesh.

He draws a curtain around the bed, concealing it, and moves unhurriedly to the door, dabbing the blood from his mouth with a handkerchief.

CUT TO:

62 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR - NIGHT. 62

SOKOLOV is sorting through his ring of keys - when the door simply opens to reveal DRACULA.

DRACULA

Gentlemen, I'm afraid I took matters into my own hands - I have some experience with locks. Do come in.

Bewildered, they start to follow him.

CUT TO:

63

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CABIN NO.9 - NIGHT.

63

DRACULA ushers them into the room (the curtain still conceals the bed.)

DRACULA

Let me save you some time.

He gestures to objects on the dresser.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Do any of you recognise these?

OLGAREN

That's Portmann's 'kerchief. I'd know it anywhere. And this?

He holds up a huge diamond ring.

LORD RUTHVEN

The Grand Duchess's. I saw it when she boarded.

ADISA

Trophies.

DRACULA

Trophies, exactly. As if all this was nothing more than a sick game. I submit this is all the evidence we need. Allow me to introduce you to -

He turns to the bed, throws back the curtain and gestures to its bloody occupant.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

- the murderer!

On AGATHA's face - what the fuck??

CUT TO:

64

EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT.

64

Close on AGATHA - still in a state of shock -
 - a noose is pulled tight around her neck!

Wider: she stands on a barrel, hands tied behind her back.
 OLGAREN, who has noosed her, jumps down from the barrel.

OLGAREN
 Anything to say?

AGATHA
 Yes! Don't hang me!

On SOKOLOV: raging. He's being held in place by PIOTR and OLGAREN, and remains so for most of the scene.

Around them: RUTHVEN, ADISA, SHARMA and DRACULA. Everyone caught in the mob-horror of the moment - there is a whiff of Salem about the scene - except Dracula, who maintains an air of fastidious regret.

SOKOLOV
 You can't do this, you can't hang that woman -

OLGAREN
 Captain, with respect - stay out of it - you kept a murderer safe on this ship ...

SHARMA
 But look at her! How could she have the strength to kill those men?

DRACULA
 Looks can be deceiving, Dr. Sharma.

SOKOLOV
 I saw a sick woman, barely able to rise from her bed - and I still do!
 It can't be her. Could she have taken Abramoff? Portmann?? Look at her!

OLGAREN
 It doesn't matter how she looks - she did it.

SHARMA
 We don't know that!

Dracula steps forward - the voice of reason.

DRACULA

Gentlemen, please. Let us not allow this situation to turn ugly.

AGATHA

It's a lynching. How much uglier can it get??

DRACULA

Perhaps, Captain Sokolov you could explain your part in all this. Calmly and in your own time.

Such is his authority, everyone quiets. Agatha rolls her eyes.

SOKOLOV

I...I got a commission. With certain stipulations.

SHARMA

A commission?

DRACULA

From a man named Balaur perhaps?

A flashes a mischievous look at Agatha, who just glowers at him.

SOKOLOV

(frowns)

Yes. He said his new wife was very sick and needed to travel to England for treatment. He paid handsomely for the Demeter to take her.

(to Agatha)

To take you.

AGATHA

I am not Mr. Balaur's bride.

OLGAREN

Enough talking! Just hang her.

AGATHA

No, wait, please, listen -

SOKOLOV

Olgaren, we are not savages!

Olgaren places his boot against the barrel.

AGATHA
You can't hang me!

OLGAREN
Give me one reason why not?

Sharma, anguished at the violence of this turns to fellow scientist, Dracula.

SHARMA
Count Dracula, is this right?

DRACULA
I regret, these circumstances call for rough justice. For the safety of all of us, she must hang.

AGATHA
No, no, listen, you can't hang me!

OLGAREN
Why not?

AGATHA Because ...

She flails - what can she say? What has she got?? How does she talk her way of this one. Her gaze settles on Dracula - who is smiling, contentedly - then Divine - or Satanic - inspiration hits.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
- I'm a vampire.

A stunned silence.

Then a laugh from Olgaren. Spreading to the others.

Except Sharma. He looks aghast.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
Oh, funny do you think? Listen to your Captain. I'm a frail and helpless woman? How did I manage to slaughter five people and dispose of their twitching corpses? Because I'm a vampire!

She looks to Dracula.

He's smiling, gives a courteous nod of approval. Nice move.

Agatha, give a smug little shrug - yeah, still got it. This is a game of almost-flirtation played over the heads of everyone else on deck.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
 (Keeping her eyes on Dracula)
 You know what a vampire is, don't you? A foul, slouching monstrosity.
 We disguise ourselves fairly well as ordinary people -

On Dracula - ooh, rude!

AGATHA (CONT'D)
 - but are roused to a bestial frenzy by the mere sight and smell of human blood.

A slight, playful shrug from Dracula - what can you do?

OLGAREN Enough!

SHARMA
 (grabs Olgaren's arm) Wait. Wait, I have experience in these matters -

OLGAREN
 There's one way to be sure you're a vampire -

SHARMA
 Listen to me! I know what I'm talking about!

OLGAREN
 - we can hang you and see if you die!

He places a foot on the barrel, ready to kick it away.

SHARMA
 If she's a vampire, she won't die!

AGATHA
 (Deadly sincerity)
 He's right. I won't die. And you will be the first one I feed off.

Olgaren hesitates. Unnerved, but not yet convinced. His smile has faltered though.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

And then I will take the rest of you. One by one. And I will make you last.

Agatha fixes on Sharma.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Look in your heart. You know it's true.

Everyone: not convinced, but hesitant.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

You think I can't? Think of the five people I have devoured already - are you in a hurry to join them?

The question hangs for a moment - is her gambit going to work?

She seizes on their hesitation.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Come on then! Which of you has the courage to kick away this barrel?

A silence. It's worked. And then an almost apologetic voice.

DRACULA

Me.

Dracula steps calmly forward.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

For Christ's sake, she's just a killer. There's no such thing as a vampire!

(Stepping towards the barrel)

Shall we end this?

He looks up at Agatha, as he places his boot on the barrel. She's silent now - seething perhaps, her mouth working.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Cat got your tongue?

He starts to push, looking to his boot -

- and splash! A drop of bright red blood lands on the toe cap.

What??

Agatha looks down at him, gleaming-eyed - blood is trickling from the corner of her mouth -

- and she spits, savagely, in his face, spattering him with her blood.

AGATHA
Biting my lip.

An instant effect. Dracula staggers back, almost wounded by the proximity of the blood. Seething, frenzied.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
Look at him, look at him!

There he is in a paroxysm of desire, breathing hard, deranged with blood lust.

AGATHA (CONT'D)
Count Dracula was telling you the truth. I'm not a vampire.
(beat)
He is.

Dracula can't stop himself snarling at her - his eyes are crazed, there is a flash of the fangs.

On Sharma: appalled. Scared. He knows it's true.

SHARMA
Count Dracula?

AGATHA
Look at him. Look at him!!

Dracula: an heroic effort of self control. He is mopping his face with a handkerchief held in a shaking hand.

DRACULA
Forgive me if I am repulsed by the blood of a murderess when it is spat in my face. Do what you will with her - I will be in my cabin!

Desperate to get away, he turns to sweep out -

- and standing in the doorway to below decks is YAMINI, staring at him. The last straw!

DRACULA (CONT'D)
Get out of my way, child!!

He raises a hand to strike her - and freezes. Because he heard the gasp: he just lost the room.

SHARMA

Don't you touch her! Don't you dare touch her!!

All around the group, the pennies are dropping. Agatha was telling the truth!

Dracula looks down at the little girl -

- who raises her shaking hands. What is this? Is she signing at him? She extends one forefinger up, and crosses it with the other - making the sign of the cross!

Count Dracula - steps back, as if momentarily winded.

AGATHA

Oh, clever girl! Sign language!

A beat: the truth is out there. And now all the others are doing the same, improvising crosses in front of themselves, using anything they have to hand.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Normally, of course, it takes a real cross - but I suppose, in the circumstances, we must forgive you for being a little suggestible.

Dracula looks round them all, a cornered beast, held at bay. Then he relaxes - oh, what the hell!

DRACULA

What a pity. I've been so enjoying this voyage. And the people.

His gaze falls on Ruthven - the ghost of a smile, the ghost of a wink.

Ruthven - wide-eyed, seduced.

Adisa: appalled and a little afraid for Ruthven.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

And I made a good detective, don't you think? I have a particular gift for eliminating suspects.

And in one savage move, he kicks the barrel from beneath her!

Agatha drops, throttling -

- every one now racing to help her, as she scrabbles at the rope round her neck.

Close on Agatha, as they support her weight, and wrestle the noose from her neck.

SHARMA

Sit up, breathe, take big breaths.

She is whooping air into her lungs.

ADISA

Dracula! Where did he go??

On Lord Ruthven, staring raptly -

Ruthven's POV: the hem of Dracula's cape disappearing in the shadows.

Ruthven: wide-eyed, he says nothing. On his face: Barely concealed excitement.

SHARMA

(to Agatha)

Relax now, breathe deeply, breathe -

Impatiently, Agatha pushes him out of the way, struggles to her feet.

AGATHA

Where is he, where's Dracula, where did he go? Was no one watching??

SHARMA

We were helping you!

AGATHA

Well in future get your priorities right! There is a vampire on board this ship. I am Sister Agatha Van Helsing of the St Mary's Convent, Budapest. Captain Sokolov?

SOKOLOV

Yes?

AGATHA

You are relieved of command.

CUT TO:

A room we have not yet seen - Dracula's cabin. As AGATHA and SOKOLOV enter it seems perfectly ordinary - and looks like it's never been used.

SOKOLOV

This is it. Dracula's cabin. It doesn't look like it's been used.

AGATHA

Although the curtain has been drawn...

As she reaches for the curtain, one of her fingernails starts to peel off. She flicks it away, negligently.

SOKOLOV

(Seeing this)

Are you all right?

AGATHA

No, no, I'm dying, but don't get distracted. Dracula needs to sleep in a coffin or box containing his own native soil. No idea why, it doesn't make a lot of sense -

SOKOLOV

Did you say soil?

AGATHA

Soil, yes. Somewhere hidden away on this ship there must a box of Transylvanian soil. Have you seen any such thing?

SOKOLOV

... We have fifty boxes of soil in the hold.

AGATHA

(Stares at him: then impatient)

Then what are we doing here??

CUT TO:

66

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SHARMA'S CABIN - DAY.

66

SHARMA is frantically collecting together his scientific equipment. LORD RUTHVEN is there too.

LORD RUTHVEN

What did you mean, you have experience of these matters?

SHARMA

My...my researches have sometimes taken me down a dark path. The continuation of life beyond the grave. The undead. The nosferatu. There are such things.

LORD RUTHVEN

Dracula put us all on this ship together for a purpose. Clearly he chose you for your knowledge -
(Smiles, preening)
I wonder what he sees in me.

SHARMA

I have no idea.
(Looks at a little ridged blue bottle in his hand)
But whatever his intentions towards me he's not taking my daughter. Did you see how he looked at her?

LORD RUTHVEN

What is that?

SHARMA

A last resort. There is death - and there is undeath...

He sets down the blue bottle on the table. Next to it, YAMINI glances at the bottle - she knows what it is.

CUT TO:

67

EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - DAY.

67

CLOSE on one of the boxes of earth.

We realise that its being heaved over the ship's railings.

PIOTR, OLGAREN, SOKALOV and AGATHA are assembled on the deck.

Between them, they sweat and strain as they topple the box over the edge and into the swirling sea.

SOKOLOV

Is that the last of them?

AGATHA

There is one more.

SOKOLOV

You heard her - one more.

As they start to move, Agatha has an inspiration - places a hand on his arm, stopping him.

AGATHA

No, wait. Better. We leave him one box. Only one resting place. Right now, he's hiding in the shadows. But daylight weakens him - he will need to rest eventually. If there is only one box ...

SOKOLOV

... we can trap him.

AGATHA

Perhaps. We can reduce his options, at least. Now we must increase ours. Captain, I assume somewhere on this ship there is a bible? I find myself temporarily embarrassed.

SOKOLOV

In my cabin.

AGATHA

Fetch it now, please.

(As Sokolov moves to go)

Wait, where is everyone? I told everyone to stay in the sunlight while we have it.

SOKOLOV

I thought we were safe during the day.

AGATHA

We are safe in the sunlight. Everyone should be on deck!

CUT TO:

68

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. SHARMA'S CABIN - DAY.

68

On YAMINI. Sitting on her bed. Weak sunlight streams through the window, and she sits in the golden shaft.

SHARMA finishing his packing. RUTHVEN lounges against the door.

RUTHVEN

But how could he fool all of us?

SHARMA

SHARMA (CONT'D)

He talked to me a like a scientist
- I felt respected for the first time in a long time.

RUTHVEN

He's a very persuasive man, the Count.

(Reflects, a little ruefully)

One might almost say ... seductive.

SHARMA

Shouldn't you be on deck, helping?

LORD RUTHVEN

I'm not quite sure where I should be at the moment. Perhaps it's time I decided where I stand.

He glances over to the door -

- and sees a shadow move underneath it. Someone is immediately outside.

Yamini frantically signs to her father(subtitled): Don't trust him!

LORD RUTHVEN (CONT'D)

If Count Dracula is Mr. Balaur, then he is my silent partner.

(A smile - a dawning possibility)

Perhaps that's what the Count sees in me - a partner.

He strolls over to the window, starts closing the curtain.

LORD RUTHVEN (CONT'D)

And if my intuition is correct ... he is about to join us.

The door creaks open. And DRACULA steps into the cabin.

DRACULA

Curtains drawn on a sunny day. My kind of room.

(To Ruthven)

Thank you.

LORD RUTHVEN

Not at all. We have a business arrangement. We are ... partners. I should like to continue that.

DRACULA

For how long?

LORD RUTHVEN

It is my understanding that a vampire is blessed with eternal life.

DRACULA

Mine too, but it does take rather a long time to be sure.

SHARMA

(appalled)

You are placing yourself in league with this creature?

LORD RUTHVEN

(Shrugs)

It's ... business.

Sharma steps forward, confronting Dracula and suddenly thrusts something towards him.

He produces a cross improvised from tongue depressors. Little Yamini has done the same.

Dracula can't help but recoil.

SHARMA

We're not stupid, you know. I'm a man of science!

DRACULA

Oh, you are one of the great minds of your age. But a prophet without honour in your own country. I, however, recognise your brilliance and look forward to consuming it.

SHARMA

(Thrusting the cross at him)

Never!

But Lord Ruthven has pulled a revolver on Sharma.

LORD RUTHVEN

Drop them. Now!

Sharma doesn't move.

LORD RUTHVEN (CONT'D)
Do you hear me??

SHARMA
(To Dracula)
I would see my daughter die - before letting her become like you!

Lord Ruthven steps toward Yamini, thrusting the gun at her - right in her face.

LORD RUTHVEN
I wonder if you mean that. Drop the cross - or I'll shoot her right in front of you.

SHARMA
You couldn't.

LORD RUTHVEN
Surrender yourself to us - or I swear I will pull this trigger!

DRACULA
What's it to be, man of reason?

Sharma: in agony.

FLASH: Sharma inspecting the scratches in the underside of the coffin lid.

But he looks to Yamini - a gun in her face, her terrified eyes.

DRACULA (CONT'D)
Dead or undead?

Trembling, on the verge of sobbing, Sharma starts to lower his cross.

Yamini - her big dark eyes, taking this in, understanding it.
No, papa, no!

SHARMA
God forgive me.

- and Yamini can't take it. Her eyes flash to the little blue bottle on the shelf.

And she grabs it, raises it to her mouth -

SHARMA (CONT'D)

No!!!

- and drinks it! She dashes it away from her!

On Sharma, watching in horror, as we hear Yamini gasp her last.

He turns slowly to Ruthven.

SHARMA (CONT'D)

(quiet)

This thing - this Dracula - is only a monster. You were supposed to be a man!

LORD RUTHVEN

... I shall be more than a man!

SHARMA

(This time as a low growl)

Hm!

And he launches himself at Ruthven, tearing at his throat. Instinctively, Ruthven fires. Blam! Blam!

Sharma clings to him with inhuman strength for a moment - then shudders his last, slides to the floor.

An exhausted pause. Lord Ruthven is appalled by what he's been part of.

DRACULA

Well - look what you've done.

LORD RUTHVEN

I did it for you.

DRACULA

Why?

LORD RUTHVEN

I thought you'd ... chosen me.

DRACULA

I chose you for Dorabella. Now you've inherited her money, I will inherit it from you ... partner.

He's moving towards him.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

Thanks for everything.

But Lord Ruthven, terrified now.

LORD RUTHVEN
No! No, please!

DRACULA
Try and stay calm. You're doing very well.

As Dracula looms over him, the camera drifts away -

- to a big close-up of the poison bottle on the floor. The stopper is still in it!

Knock! Knock!

PIOTR
(V.O.)
Lord Ruthven?

CUT TO:

69

INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR OF CABINS - DUSK.

69

PIOTR knocks at the door of a cabin. No response

He tries again.

PIOTR
Sir?

He opens the door - to reveal an empty cabin. (He's knocking at a different door.)

He moves on, glances through the next door -

- Dracula's cabin, standing empty.

He moves on to the next one. Sharma's. Knocks.

PIOTR (CONT'D)
Dr Sharma?

Nothing. He opens the door -

- and oh my God!

YAMINI and SHARMA lie dead. And DRACULA is feasting horribly on a twitching RUTHVEN.

Dracula looks up, fixes Piotr with that terrible black stare.

Piotr, frozen in the door way.

CUT TO:

70

EXT. 'THE DEMETER' - DECK - DUSK

70

On a stake being whittled.

Wider: OLGAREN is doing the work.

SISTER AGATHA is tearing pages from the Bible, and using the scraps to make a circle of paper. As she lays each one down SOKOLOV hammers it into the deck, securing it in place with a tack.

ADISA watches, skeptical.

ADISA

I still don't see the point.

AGATHA

The holy word of our Lord. This worked back in the convent with sacramental bread, so I suppose we must have faith.

ADISA

Is this all we have left?
Superstition? Fairy tales.

OLGAREN

You saw the effect the cross had on him!

ADISA

It's no less of a superstition because a madman believes it too. We have a killer on board. A human man, however delusional.

SOKOLOV

(On his own tack) Convent?

AGATHA

I mentioned I was a nun.

ADISA

Oh, perfect, she's a nun! We need a general, we need strategy - not nuns!

SOKOLOV
You don't seem like a nun.

AGATHA
It has been said.

Piotr comes tearing up on deck, breathless, white-faced.

OLGAREN
(Immediately concerned)
What's wrong, boy? What's happened?

Piotr - can't speak for a moment, tears in his eyes.

CUT TO:

71 EXT. SEA - NIGHT 71

The sun has just set. The foggy sky is darkening.

CUT TO:

72 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT 72

SOKOLOV steers. (AGATHA has arranged the circle to include the wheel.)

The survivors are huddled together inside the circle, ringed by lit, sputtering candles.

The motion of the ship is hypnotic.

The creak of the wheel.

The slap of the water against the hull.

The wind moaning through the rigging.

OLGAREN is whittling his stake with a knife, ready for battle.

Agatha seems to be meditating, her eyes closed.

Sokolov is deep in thought at the wheel.

On Adisa. His face fixed, his jaw tight. But a single tear has escaped from his eye.

Olgaren is looking at him curiously.

OLGAREN

Tears for your master? I thought you despised him.

Adisa angrily wipes the tear away.

ADISA

He wasn't my master.

A silence, as Olgaren absorbs this, thoughtfully.

Now, on Agatha, her eyes still shut.

AGATHA

Captain Sokolov, please stop frowning.

SOKOLOV

Your eyes are shut.

AGATHA

It's audible.

SOKOLOV

This circle that's supposed to protect us ...

AGATHA

I believe it will.

SOKOLOV

You said it worked at the convent.

AGATHA

Yes.

SOKOLOV

And yet you're here. So what happened?

AGATHA

Dracula gained entry by disguising himself in the skin of another -

She breaks off - her eyes snap open.

SOKOLOV

Sister Agatha?

Agatha: new thoughts. The cogs are whirring in her brain, and her eyes are widening in alarm.

Slowly she turns to look at Piotr.

On Piotr: silhouetted against the candle-light, quiet.

Casually, no fuss - she places her hand on the sharpened stake at her side.

AGATHA

Piotr?

Dead silence. Piotr doesn't respond in any way. His face is lost in shadow.

Agatha and Sokolov exchange a look. Could it be?

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Piotr?

OLGAREN

Wake up, boy.

For a moment, Piotr doesn't respond. Then he raises his head slightly. Only his eyes are visible in the candlelight, blinking slowly - sleepily? - at Agatha.

AGATHA

If you please, tell me again what happened below decks? I think you came across Dracula feeding on the Englishman. Correct?

On Adisa - determinedly not reacting.

PIOTR

Yes.

AGATHA

Dracula saw you?

PIOTR

Yes.

AGATHA

And then he let you go.

PIOTR

... yes.

AGATHA

May one ask ... why?

PIOTR

I don't know.

AGATHA

No, Piotr - I don't know either.

An uneasy silence.

OLGAREN

Go on, Piotr. You just have to explain.

PIOTR

I told you. He was ... drinking Lord Ruthven's blood. He was ... busy.

AGATHA

Busy. Yes.

PIOTR

I ran. I don't think he cared about me, he just let me go.

(Looks to Olgaren)

Olgaren? What's going on?

(No response)

Viktor?

Olgaren does his best to smile, but is unnerved.

OLGAREN

Just ... just try and explain boy.

Despite his sickly smile, Olgaren's hand has moved to his stake. Not aggressively - just checking where it is. Like a marshal laying his hand on his six shooter.

PIOTR

(Desperate edge)

I have explained! That's all there is!

SOKOLOV

Piotr, we just need to be sure you have not been ...

(Looks to Agatha)

... contaminated?

AGATHA

Occupied.

SOKOLOV

How do we do that?

Agatha looks at the circle of holy papers surrounding them.

AGATHA

Piotr ... you entered the circle before it was complete, yes?

PIOTR

I think so. I didn't really notice
...

AGATHA

Now the circle is closed, a vampire would be unable to cross the line of it under any circumstances.

(A beat: she fixes him in the eye.)

Piotr step outside the circle.

PIOTR

But ... but you said it wasn't safe
...

OLGAREN

You can't do this to the boy!

AGATHA

It will only be for a moment.

SOKOLOV

(Gentle but firm)

Piotr ... step outside the circle.

Piotr looks at him, pleading, moist-eyed.

SOKOLOV (CONT'D)

That's an order.

AGATHA

Just cross the line. One moment, in and out.

Piotr, trembling, stands.

SOKOLOV

Do it. Now.

Piotr looks across the shadowed deck. Wills himself -
- and places one foot outside the circle.

OLGAREN

Well done, boy. Now - back inside.

AGATHA

No. Both feet.

Piotr looks at her in terror. Is he about to reveal himself?
Or is he about to die?

Agatha: implacable.

Shaking, he puts his other foot outside the circle!

On his foot, as it descends -

- the moment it makes contact with the deck -

- a terrible cobra hiss -

We slam into a massive close-up of Dracula, mouth stretched wide, fangs extended -

- Agatha is already pulling Piotr to safety!

Wider: Dracula is suddenly standing there, just outside the circle -

- and the cobra hiss is becoming a rather more human snigger.

DRACULA

Oh, that was hilarious!

(To Agatha)

Fun playing detective, isn't it?

One tip - it's easier if you're also the murderer.

OLGAREN

God protect us, God protect us!

He crosses himself feverishly.

Dracula steps forward but stops outside the circle of wafer.

DRACULA

Ah. This again.

(Prods it with his foot)

Tedious book.

ADISA

What...what do you want?

DRACULA

What I always want.

(shrugs)

Something to eat. A bit of company.

AGATHA

Your boxes are destroyed. You have no refuge. No place of solace.

DRACULA

I notice one of my boxes is still in the hold.

AGATHA

You're welcome to go and sleep there, any time you like.

(Raises the stake!!)

We won't wake you.

DRACULA

Oh, I see. You left it as a lure, as a trap.

(smiles)

I am going to miss you.

AGATHA

I will spare you that heartache.

DRACULA

Too kind.

(To business - he starts strolling round the circle)

Well then - I wonder which of you it's going to be.

AGATHA

Which of us what?

DRACULA

Oh, one of you is going to break.
The night is young.

SOKOLOV

You expect us to...give ourselves up to you?

DRACULA

(pleasantly)

Yes.

SOKOLOV

But why?

DRACULA

What's the alternative? It's only a matter of time.

(Passionate now - he means this)

Oh, come on. Let's not be dull.
Don't you at least want a good death? Take your chances! Die fighting, die in battle - as every living thing is supposed to.
Better, surely, than this dreary stalemate.

ADISA

It's not a stalemate, Count Dracula. We have an advantage over you. Or at least, I do.

Everyone looks at him. Especially Agatha.

ADISA (CONT'D)

Alone on this boat, it seems, I am not a lunatic.

He looks Adisa up and down.

DRACULA

Now you interest me.

ADISA

Pages from an old book, nailed to the deck - and you can't walk past them? I wish all murderers were so accommodating.

DRACULA

Your...disbelief. Your scepticism.
Your conflict. It's a strong flavour. Intoxicating!

Adisa just stares at him.

AGATHA

Don't let him confuse you, Adisa!

ADISA

I am not confused. This man killed
Tom. Lord Ruthven. He took the love of my life, and I will not play his games.

(To Dracula)

Where is he? What have you done with his -

Breaks off. Can't bring himself to say 'body'.

DRACULA

Fish meat. Like the rest of them.
One learns to keep a tidy slaughterhouse. Tell me, Adisa - what do you see standing before you?

ADISA

A man.

DRACULA

Only that?

ADISA

Less than that. A murderer.

DRACULA

If you're so confident ... if you're so angry ... step outside of the circle.

He looks at the crumbled white ring of holy paper on the decking.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I mean, what is this stuff? Ancient words on ancient paper. Print and platitudes.

(laughs)

Leave this...this circle of the banal.

AGATHA

Even if you don't believe what is self-evident, Adisa, you know he's dangerous.

Adisa doesn't move.

DRACULA

What's the matter? Less sure now? Is that it? What a shame. I prefer your certainty, it will taste so much better. Step out of the circle and dance with me.

Adisa moves a step.

AGATHA

Adisa, don't throw away your life to prove a point!

Adisa takes a pistol from his coat.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

That won't do you any good!

ADISA

They call it a life-preserver. Well, I have faith in it. I have faith in steel and powder.

SOKOLOV

Don't be a bloody fool!

PIOTR

Shoot him! Just shoot him now!

AGATHA

Fine! Try shooting him if you must, but do it from inside the circle.

OLGAREN

Yes. Shoot the bastard! Do it!

AGATHA

We must remain strong and united and inside the circle.

DRACULA

Yes. Stay inside! Do as you're told, do as they all tell you, that's what you're good at. You're a servant. However stupid your masters, however beautiful, you are destined to remain in the shadows, a guilty secret.

On Adisa: a lifetime of resentment in those eyes. His jaw clenches, and -

- he steps boldly from the circle.

Dracula's eyes light up.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I knew you could do it. Your own man, at the end.

AGATHA

Get back inside! Get back here.

Dracula gazes at Adisa and his eyes blaze crimson.

Adisa aims the pistol at Dracula.

ADISA

This is an execution. This is for Tom.

He fires.

One.

Two.

Three.

The bullets blast through Dracula, leaving holes he barely seems to notice. He smiles.

Four.

Five.

Six.

Dracula smiles pleasantly.

DRACULA

Ow.

Adisa knows he was wrong. Dead wrong. He turns to race back into the circle.

But it's too late.

Like a pouncing panther, Dracula lunges for Adisa's neck and takes a massive chunk out of it.

Adisa screams - and dies.

Suddenly, Piotr launches himself at Dracula with the stake.

He thrusts it towards Dracula's chest but the vampire grabs him and hurls him back.

Piotr smashes against the rum barrel. It splits, and rum starts to gush over the deck.

Sokolov tries next - grabbing the knife and swinging it at Dracula. He slices through Dracula's cloak. But Dracula merely smacks him aside with one almighty blow of his hand -

- but in the same moment Olgaren slams into Dracula toppling the two of them to the deck -

- now the rum is soaking into Dracula's cloak -

On Agatha, seeing the spilling rum - an idea!

AGATHA

Keep him down, keep him on the deck. Olgaren!

With one massive thrust, Olgaren slams his iron spiked hand through Dracula's cloak, fastening him to the deck.

OLGAREN

The knife! The knife!

Sokolov is dazed from the impact, doesn't respond.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)

Quickly!

Piotr understands at once, races over, grabs the knife from Sokolov and slams it into the other side of Dracula's cloak - pinning him to the deck like a monstrous preserved butterfly.

The rum sloshes all over him.

Dracula struggles to rise, momentarily trapped - hissing in frustration and rage.

Olgaren wrenches free of his prosthetic spike, staggers back.

On Dracula, screaming his rage, fighting to get free

- the cloak is starting to tear -

- but when he looks up, he freezes.

Agatha stands over him - she is holding a lantern in front of her ...

What??

Then he gets it - he looks down at the rum soaking into his clothes -

Oh shit!

AGATHA

Go to hell.

She drops the lantern on to him -

It shatters and WHUMPF!!

In seconds, Dracula is immolated - pinioned to the deck by the dagger and the iron spike - he is unable to escape.

He shrieks in agony. It is a dreadful, unforgettable sound.

His burning body lights up the night.

He pulls and tears at his garments and at last succeeds in freeing himself from his cloak.

A seething ball of flame, he hurls himself over the rails and into the sea.

In seconds, he has vanished into the rushing waves.

Agatha, Olgaren, Sokolov and Piotr race to the side.

SOKOLOV

(From off)

How long are you going to keep checking?

She looks up. SOKOLOV has arrived - fond but reproving.

AGATHA

Till I'm sure.

SOKOLOV

It's been weeks.

AGATHA

If he survived it would take time for him to heal those wounds.

SOKOLOV

But according to you, he could only do so lying in a bed of his own earth. That is the only one on board.

(Smiles)

Have faith.

AGATHA

I struggle with faith.

SOKOLOV

We're a few hours from docking at Whitby. Do you want to join us on deck?

AGATHA

You still have one lifeboat left, yes?

SOKOLOV

Yes, why?

AGATHA

Because this ship must never reach England.

SOKOLOV

What are you talking about?

AGATHA

Your cargo. I've been going through it.

She wanders round pointing at various boxes - they all have their lids removed.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

We have everything here we need.

Sokolov looks into the nearest box. It is full of porcelain dolls.

SOKOLOV

For a dolls tea party?

AGATHA

No. Saltpeter, sulphur, charcoal.

SOKOLOV

For gunpowder?

AGATHA

There's at least enough to blow a decent-sized hole in the hull, don't you think? I thought over here might be a good spot.

She's led the way over to a section of the hull.

SOKOLOV

(Examining the hull)

That would take her down all right.

But why?

Out of his sight, Agatha is inspecting the last of her fingernails - as it peels off and falls to the deck,

AGATHA

No trace of the vampire's foul contagion can be allowed to reach the new world. Trust me on this. We must sink the Demeter!

Sokolov sighs to the depth of his lungs.

SOKOLOV

When will you accept that you've won?

AGATHA

When I'm dead.

She says it playfully - but the full import hits him.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

The curse of the vampire lives inside me. Under no circumstances can I come with you to England.

SOKOLOV

Agatha, no. I refuse to even consider -

AGATHA

Tell them of Dracula, if you wish. Tell them what happened here on board the Demeter - but tell no one where it lies. Better still, tell them it sank somewhere else, far from here. We must protect the curious from themselves.

SOKOLOV

But he's dead.

AGATHA

Consider this a plague ship - all precautions must be taken.

(He hasn't moved.)

No more words. Explain what's happening to Olgaren and Piotr, and get off this ship. You may leave the arrangement of the gunpowder to me - I have led a varied life.

Sokolov: lost for words. She's right but it's so hard to accept.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Now! Go now. I don't have all day - quite literally, as it turns out.

SOKOLOV

(About to embark on a long speech)

Sister Agatha -

AGATHA

No more!

He has no words left - so he just takes her in his arms and hugs her.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

I'm a nun.

SOKOLOV

You mentioned.

The camera drifts away from them, to the crate of dolls. A fly lands on one of their faces.

Close: the fly starts to crawl on to the doll's shiny white eye (just like with Harker in ep 1.)

DISSOLVE TO:

75 EXT. SEA/'THE DEMETER' - SUNSET

75

In the distance we can see the English coastline.

The lifeboat has been lowered. PIOTR is already sitting in it, with some provisions. OLGAREN climbing in to join him. The mood is sombre. Sokolov is above, at the top of the ladder.

PIOTR
It's not right.

OLGAREN
I know. But it must be done.

PIOTR
But Sister Agatha -

OLGAREN
God will take care of Sister Agatha
- if God knows what's good for Him.

Looks up to Sokolov.

OLGAREN (CONT'D)
I think we're ready to go.

Sokolov looks to the shore - a moment of sombre reflection.

DISSOLVE TO:

76 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. THE HOLD - SUNSET

76

A formidable pile of gunpowder is now stacked against the bulkhead.

AGATHA is finishing preparing a fuse. Now she sits back, looking at her completed work. Ready - not ready.

A big sigh.

A little self-consciously, she clasps her hands in prayer.

AGATHA
I suppose there's time for one last attempt at conversation.
(MORE)

AGATHA (CONT'D)

One hopes there's room for negotiation on suicide as a mortal sin.

But before she can begin, a creak from above.

Her eyes fly open. What was that??

Another creak. Now, quite clearly, footsteps.

No. No!!

She springs to her feet.

CUT TO:

77 INT. 'THE DEMETER' - CORRIDOR OF CABINS/DRACULA'S CABIN - 77 NIGHT

AGATHA appearing up the stairs. Looking around.

AGATHA

Hello? Is someone there?

A quick glance round - the cabin doors stand open. Blood in some of the rooms. Ruthven's cabin, the Sharmas', Number 9 - the now silent field of battle.

She looks round -

- the door to Dracula's cabin stands open. Through the porthole, a view of the distant foggy coastline.

She steps quickly in, goes to the port-hole, looks out.

Mistily visible, the lifeboat bobbing away towards shoreline.
A pang of loneliness.

Suddenly, very weary, Agatha sits on the bed.

Then -

A creak from behind her.

She is not alone.

Slowly she turns -

- and standing in the doorway is SOKOLOV, with a bottle of rum and two glasses.

SOKOLOV

Going down with the ship - I learned a long time ago, that's the captain's job.

He raises the bottle.

SOKOLOV (CONT'D)

One for the road?

A beat. She relents.

AGATHA

One for the road.

SOKOLOV

On deck then.

He exits the cabin. She goes to rise -

- and then just freezes!

A new thought, filling her head.

AGATHA

(sotto)

A bed! A bed of his own earth.

She leaps up tears the bedclothes off, throws aside the mattress -

- and there is it. In the hollow well of the bed, a layer of soil. Clearly visible in it - the impress of a sleeping form.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

He's alive.

(Yelling now)

Sokolov, he's alive! HE'S ALIVE!!

She races out into the corridor, to see -

- Sokolov sprawled on the floor, blood gushing from his neck.

DRACULA pops his head round a door. He is perfectly restored, except for his clothes which hang in charred rags.

DRACULA

Sokolov isn't. I fear I may have bolted him - starving.

Agatha stares at him in shock.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

I believe the plan was for a drink on deck. I hope I'm a reasonable substitute.

He goes.

Stricken, horrified, Agatha moves to Sokolov's still body.
She kneels by him for a moment, touching his face ...

... and his eyes snap open.

With tremendous effort he manages a few hoarse words ...

SOKOLOV

Keep ... him ... talking ...

On Agatha. She understands.

CUT TO:

78 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT.

78

DRACULA at the wheel, as AGATHA comes on deck.

DRACULA

Ah, this takes me back. About three centuries, in fact.

She smiles. Joins him.

DRACULA (CONT'D)

We must do it again some time.

AGATHA

I think probably not.

DRACULA

I quite agree.

CUT TO:

79 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. CORRIDOR OF CABINS - NIGHT

79

SOKOLOV dragging himself along, towards the stairs.

CUT TO:

80 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT

80

DRACULA and AGATHA.

DRACULA
How are you feeling?

AGATHA
Particularly mortal. How about you?

DRACULA
Indestructible.

AGATHA
How did you do it?

DRACULA
I swam under the boat, and climbed up the other side. As escapes go, basic but effective.

AGATHA
I really thought we'd won.

DRACULA
Well, my pride was a little ...
singed.
(Looks at her for a moment, a sad smile)
If it's any comfort, Agatha, you got closer than anyone.

They hold each other's look. What does that mean?

CUT TO:

81 INT. 'THE DEMETER'. HOLD - NIGHT 81

Trailing blood, SOKOLOV is dragging himself into the hold -
- the pile of gunpowder just a few feet away.

CUT TO:

82 EXT. 'THE DEMETER'. DECK - NIGHT 82

DRACULA and AGATHA.

Dracula glances towards the horizon. Whitby Abbey looms ahead on the cliffs.

DRACULA
Look. The pawn nearly made it to the other side of the board. But I'm afraid there will be no second Queen.

AGATHA

Piotr and Olgaren got away.

DRACULA

You can't eat them all. I missed out on Dr. Sharma too. Shame. I love science. Science is the future.

AGATHA

And yet you still fear the cross.

DRACULA

Of course I do. Everyone does. That's the problem. It's not a symbol of virtue and kindness. It is a mark of horror and oppression. Your idiot church has terrorised the peasant population for centuries. I have been imbibing the blood of those same peasants for so long, I have absorbed their fear of the cross!! Their perfectly reasonable fear of your dreadful church.

(beat)

Oh God, I can't wait to eat some atheists.

Agatha looks at him - shrewd, hard.

AGATHA

No.

DRACULA

I'm sorry?

AGATHA

No. Very nice and logical, but that is not the reason.

DRACULA

What makes you so sure?

AGATHA

Because I think, Count Dracula, I am coming to know you. I know when you are lying.

DRACULA

Why would I bother lying to you?

AGATHA

You wouldn't. It is not me to whom you are lying.

A beat on him, annoyed at this. Then he is arrested by a new thought.

DRACULA

Why are you making conversation?

AGATHA

People do.

DRACULA

You don't.

AGATHA

It's never too late to change.

DRACULA

You're trying to draw me into an argument. Why? Are you trying to distract me?

AGATHA

What is it you always say. Oh yes!
(She grins at him)
One should never rush a nun!

And - BOOM!!

- an explosion from below. The ship rocks violently.

Dracula spins, understands. And the mask drops, the feral beast roars. He grabs Agatha, the fangs bared -

They are nose to nose for a moment -

- but there is no fear in Agatha's face.

AGATHA (CONT'D)

Go ahead. I win. The last thing your eyes will ever see, is the contempt in mine.

For a moment, he is beyond rage -

- then he throws her to the deck, and races off -

On Agatha, lying dazed, just the faintest trace of a smile.

CUT TO:

OLGAREN
We honour them.

 PIOTR How?

 OLGAREN
By telling their story. So - what did you think of your first time at sea, Piotr.

 PIOTR Marius.

 OLGAREN Marius?

 PIOTR
That's my real name.
(Smiles)
That's what my friends call me.

As Olagren starts to smile back ...

... a movement under a tarpaulin. They exchange a look -
- then a small figure crawls out from under.

 PIOTR (CONT'D)
Yamini! You were dead.

 YAMINI
I didn't drink the poison. I just pretended.

 OLGAREN
But this is wonderful, this is God's own work ... But where have you been all this time?

Piotr notices something else under the tarpaulin - a seagull, its head freshly bitten off.

 YAMINI
Hiding. I didn't know who I could trust.

 PIOTR
How can you be speaking? When did you learn to speak??

 YAMINI
I played hide and seek with Count
Dracula. He said I was very good.
(MORE)

YAMINI (CONT'D)

(Smiles)

When he found me.

Then her mouth stretches open, revealing terrible fangs ...

FADE TO BLACK:

87 EXT. UNDERWATER - NIGHT.

87

Fade up.

Dracula's box in its sandy grave. A deeper grave. Much more sand...

Thump. Thump. Thump.

The trunk begins to splinter. DRACULA's fist punches through it and suddenly he breaks free.

For a moment, he merely sits there amongst the debris.

Then he does something extraordinary. He doesn't swim away. He stands and he starts to walk over the sea bed. It's an uncanny sight.

The sand begins to turn into an incline. The shore.

Dracula calmly walks under the water as the incline rises.

CUT TO:

88 EXT. WHITBY. SHORE - NIGHT.

88

The calm sea. Black and lifeless.

Then suddenly DRACULA emerges, like some diabolical Venus, from the waves.

His long black hair and tattered clothes are soaking but he smiles. He has survived.

Again he has survived.

He glances up at the clifftop. Whitby Abbey is silhouetted against the moonlight.

And now a whole new world is his to feast upon.

Suddenly, a sound. An alien, unfamiliar sound.

Clatter, clatter, clatter.

A wind rises up, buffeting the vampire as he steps onto the rocky shore.

Then a massive spotlight appears over Dracula. He stares up at it.

Clatter, clatter, clatter.

Helicopters are descending!

Black cars scream onto the beach!

Dracula looks wildly round, genuinely disorientated.

ARMED MEN pile out, machine guns aimed at the vampire.

Then, calmly and with complete assurance, a WOMAN steps out of one of the cars.

Dracula watches as she approaches him, her shoes crunching on the beach.

This is ZOE. She's in her 40s. Striking. And strikingly familiar.

She looks an awful lot like Agatha Van Helsing (and also played by Dolly Wells!)

ZOE

Welcome to England, Count Dracula.

Dracula stares at her. For once in his un-dead existence, completely non-plussed.

ZOE (CONT'D)

What kept you?

END OF EPISODE TWO